HOW GRANT HONORED ENEMY.

Federal Leader Ordered Bonfires for General Pickett's Firstborn.

Omaha Bee. Mrs. George E. Pickett, widow of the Confederate general, George E. Pickett, leader of the famous charge of Pickett's division at the battle of Gettysburg, delivered an address last evening at the Benson Grand Army reunion grounds on the "Battle of Gettysburg."

"I did not become the bride of Gen. Pickett until shortly after the battle of Gettysburg," said Mrs. Pickett in an interview yesterday afternoon, "though I was familiar with every detail of the battle from his reports and letters. Gen. Pickett died eleven years after the war. We have one son, who is named after his father. He is now a major in the United States army, connected with the paymasters department, and is on duty at the Presidio, San Francisco, Cal. He has served also in the Philippines, and it is a pride to me to know that when the opportunity offered he proved himself worthy of his father."

"Ma. Pickett, our son was born July 17, 1864, at Richmond. At that time, you will remember, Gen. Grant had begun the investment of Richmond, and the two armies were pretty close together. While on his road to Richmond to see his boy, Gen. Pickett who was very popular with the army, was constantly congratulated by his soldiers and officers and some of them built bonfires in honor of the event. These bonfires attracted the attention of Gen. Grant who asked the cause. Being told that Gen. Pickett was thus being congratulated over his new son, Gen. Grant remarked, 'Put a match to some of the brush heaps along our front there in honor of Pickett's boy.' Later a set of baby silverware was sent through the lines to our house with the donors' names attached to a card and the most cordial expressions of congratulations. The signers were Gen. Phil Sheridan, Gen. Meade, and other old friends and West Point class mates of my husband."

HOUSE HAS GHOST MYSTERY.

Visitors From Spiritland Perform Queer Stunts in Broad Daylight.

New York World. Scarcely a mile east of the Yale-Harvard crew's training quarters in Center Groton there have been strange doings in the past three days in the farm house owned by George R. Hempstead. The villagers are mystified at the happenings in this usually quiet household. The Hempstead house was built half a century ago, but had never before this had the reputation of being haunted.

The first antics noticed by the Hempstead family took place on Wednesday evening of this week, when spools of thread began to tumble from the work basket on the second floor down the stairs, and sometimes apparently through the air directly at the feet of Mrs. Hempstead in the dining room below. Mr. and Mrs. Hempstead are prominent members of the Groton Ferry Baptist Church and are highly respected members of Groton borough. Several professional men, accompanied by newspaper correspondents visited the Hempstead farm this morning to ascertain the truth of the stories about the farm house, and were cordially received by farmer Hempstead and his good natured wife.

"We cannot account for the mysterious goings on here the past three days," said Mr. Hempstead, apologetically, as he ushered his visitors into the sitting room. The inquisitive delegation who had walked from Groton Ferry to the Hempstead farm did not have long to wait for manifestations, for spools of thread soon dropped to the floor, tiny marbles which the boys had been playing with about the house, moved slowly from one room to another, and beans, which had also been used in a childish game, were seen to arise from the floor and seek new locations.

Mr. Hempstead merely shook his head while the phenomena, or whatever it might be termed, was in progress, while his wife looked at the deeply interested visitors with an expression that said, "I hope you are satisfied."

"Are you not afraid, especially at night, on account of these mysterious doings?" ventured one of the party. "Yes, of course I am," she replied, as she shook her head. "There has been no one harmed and what has happened has been of a trivial nature, so we might as well stay here as anywhere else."

BOY'S LOVE FOR HIS DOG

Carries Pain-Crazed Animal to Hospital, Though Bitten Repeatedly Philadelphia Inquirer.

Crushed and maimed by the heavy wheels of an automobile, which had passed over it, a little dog lay in the middle of Broad street, near Master, yesterday afternoon. Its legs were broken and its head bleeding. It lay there helpless to move, uttering pitiful cries.

Over the prostrate little body stooped a boy. He was the little canine's master, and the tears coursed down his cheeks. From the days of its puppyhood, two years ago, it has been his playmate and constant companion.

The boy was Frank Confell, 12 years old. At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon boy and dog started for a walk. To hours later the latter lay crushed and bleeding in Broad street. Tenderly the lad stooped down and took the injured dog in his arms. Between carriages, bicycles, and automobiles the boy wended his way to the sidewalk, all the while whispering words of comfort to the injured animal.

But apparently pain had dulled the dog's ears, even to the sound of his master's voice. It cried and howled, and its broken, useless little legs hung limp. As Frank laid his cheek against the shaggy head of his bosom companion, the dog's jaws opened in a howl of pain. Before the boy removed his face the jaws closed convulsively. And his cheek was lacerated and bleeding.

"It's all right, Beetle," he whispered. "I know you didn't mean to do it. You wouldn't have done it but for the pain, I know," he said gently into a torn ear.

Pain was crazing little Beetle by this time, though, and he snapped at everything.

Blindly he snapped again, and this time he caught his master's wrist. And again and again he bit the boy. All the while he was being carried east on Master street. Confell was bound for the Children's Homeopathic Hospital, there to seek treatment for the maimed dog.

Until he reached the hospital, the lad refused to unclasp little Beetle, and the doctors assured him that his loyalty might result in the saving of the dog's life.

Four wounds on face, hands, and arms, had to be cauterized, and then the physicians turned their attention to "little Beetle," whom the boy had vainly insisted should receive first treatment. Three of its legs were broken, and its ears and tail were torn and lacerated, but the doctors think they can pull it through all right if Beetle is a patient patient.

PRECAUTIONARY

Indianapolis News: What, now the lady wears two veils To hide still more her charming features When in her auto forth she sails, and gazes down on mere male creatures?

Alas, 'tis so! We only see The sparkle of her eyes so roguish! But how could such thing come to be? What makes the double veil so vogueish?

Why is it that her dainty nose, Her shell-like ears, her cheeks like peaches, Her rosebud mouth with dainty rows Are now beyond the vision's reaches?

The charm of life is from us torn, Our greatest joy is from us taken, When hidden is her face. Forlorn Are we, and lonely and forsaken.

Alack, though we protest and sigh, And even weep in our dejection The lady's adamant. 'Cause why? She's gotta care for her complexion.

Important Telegram from Vorys.

Cincinnati Enquirer. There was much excitement at republican state headquarters this morning. A "rush" telegram was received from Chairman Arthur I. Vorys at Hot Springs.

Directly Seth Hoover of the organization staff, was seen to dash madly for the elevator and disappear.

The excitement reached a nerve racking climax when Hoover returned breathless, and carrying a package.

"I got it!" he shouted. "Now to get it to him."

And once more he dashed away. The strain grew so terrific that at last an inquiry was made to relieve the pressure. Whereupon the telegram was read. It said:

"For heaven's sake go down to the Dutchman's and get me some fine cut. There isn't an ounce of it in Hot Springs.

"VORYS."

THE LAZY MR. SMITH

New York American: Philosopher Mr. Smith never let himself grope teary.

Everything that came along left him gay and cheery. He smiled, when all his money went in bank and business wrecks, "I'm glad it's gone—it saves the job of signing endless checks."

Smith's home was quite a mansion, though very snug and cozy; yet when it burned to ashes he deemed the outlook rosy.

"Of course, I liked the place," he said, "but things are just as well, I hated, coming home at night, to have to ring the bell."

He had a wife for twenty years and loved her very dearly; yet when at length she up and died he acted very queerly.

"I'm rather glad that Polly's gone," he said (in doubtful taste.)

"Because I teaves the tedious task of buttoning up her waist."

The time that Smith was nearly killed beneath a flying trolley.

He didn't make lament at all, but seemed to think it jolly.

They said his legs must both come off; he chuckled at the news and murmured, "Ain't I lucky to get out of lacing shoes?"

He reached a ripe old age, did Smith, because he didn't worry; but when the Reaper came along he came in quite a hurry;

And as the doctors broke the news, Smith gayly welcomed death, "Because," he said, "I'm sick and tired of the job of drawing breath."

GOOD NEWS.

Many New Bern Readers Have Heard It and Profited Thereby.

"Good news travels fast," and the thousands of bad back sufferers in New Bern are glad to learn that prompt relief is within their reach. Many a lame weak and aching back is bad no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Our citizens are telling the good news of their experience with the old Quaker Remedy. Here is an example worth reading.

C. P. Bartling, 136 Middle Street, New Bern, N. C., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did several years ago, after they cured me of a severe case of kidney trouble. Before I learn of them, I had suffered considerably from backache and pains through my loins often being in such a condition that I could not attend to my work. The kidney secretions plainly evidenced by their unnatural appearance that my kidneys were out of order and learning of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box at Bradham's Drug store. They went directly to the seat of my trouble and I had not taken them long before I was cured. During the years which have elapsed, I have never had occasion to use a kidney remedy, as my cure proved to be a permanent one.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Company, Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.
