T. L. Tate and Garland Williams, both of Greenlee, were in town last Friday. Mr. Williams came to have his hand dressed by a physician, having had the misfortune Friday morning to cut off his fore finger of the left arm at the first joint, while operating a feed cutter.

A disease called "sore-head" or roup is playing havoc with chickens in and around Marion. It is to be hoped that the utmost caution will be taken to prevent the further spreading of the disease, and that the coops of local dealers will be kept in sanitary condition so that no diseased fowls will be sold for domestic purposes.

Walden, the famous magician, gave over an hour of magic and illusion at the Graded School auditorium last Saturday night to a large audience. His entertainment was clever and artistic. The program contained many attractive features and his performance was a mystery from start to finish. The entertainment was a success financially. The date of the second attraction of the lyceum course will be announced soon.

That improved methods in farming and proper cultivation of the soil pays and pays well has been demonstrated by Lee Miller, a progressive and well-to-do farmer of McDowell county. On his farm near Marion this year Mr. Miller raised eight hundred bushels of fine corn, over three hundred bushels of wheat, a quantity of hay, etc. Some ten or fifteen years ago, we are told, a two-horse wagon could have hauled away the total production of this farm at one load.

Daughters Meet.

The Daughters of the Confederacy held their regular monthly meeting in their room in the Marion Club building on Monday afternoon. There was quite a large attendance. Mrs. J. Q. Gilkey, the president, read some interesting papers describing the recent State and National meetings. An historical sketch of "Arlington," the home of Robert E. Lee, now the national cemetery, was read by Miss Winslow. Several new names were added to the roll, the chapter now numbering about fifty.

All of the camps of Patriotic Sons of America of McDowell county will meet in district meeting at White Pine in Mumsford Cove township on Saturday, Nov. 18th. We hope to carry a full account of this meeting in next week's issue. Supt. D. F. Giles and other speakers will address the meeting.
