GREAT DISASTER ON WALL STREET

MORE THAN SCORE KILLED BY A MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSION AND MANY INJURED

BLAST ROCKED SKYSCRAPERS

Two Minutes later, Nearly All of the Exchanges closed, their Occupants Turning to An Errand of Mercy

New York.—A mysterious explosion disastrous in its effect, occurred at noon in Wall Street, killing more than a score of persons and injuring hundreds.

Office workers were just hurrying into the street for their noon day meal when a jet of black smoke and flame rose from the center of the world's great street of finance.

Then came a blast. A moment later scores of men, women and children were lying, blood-covered, on the pavements.

Two minutes later, nearly all the exchanges had closed. Men had turned from barter to an errand of mercy—and there was need of it.

While the police tolled for hours seeking the dead and injured, trained investigators were trying in vain to determine definitely whether the explosion had occurred from a bomb dropped in front of the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., or whether an automobile dashing into a wagon loaded with explosives, had taken its toll.

Frank Francisco, one of the most able investigators of the department of justice, declared after arriving on the scene that it was his opinion that not a bomb plot but a collision had been responsible for the blast which rocked skyscrapers, tore the glass from office buildings for blocks around and scattered deadly missiles in all directions.

Buying Public Rebelled

Charleston, W. Va.—The buying public has "rebelled" against ever-mounting prices and has forced a period of readjustment of values. Vice-Governor Platt, of the federal reserve board, declared in a speech here before the annual convention of the West Virginia Bankers Association. Analysis of the country's business condition with respect to the price situation disclose a marked lessening of demand, he said, adding that the refusal to buy was traceable directly to public sentiment against high prices.

Brother in Asheville

Asheville.—Peter Joseph MacSwiney brother of Lord Mayor Terence MacSwiney, the imprisoned Irish official, said that members of the immediate family of the hunger striker would make no effort to dissuade him from his purpose. He expressed the opinion that there was nothing which could be done to save his brother's life.

THIRD EPIDEMIC OF INFLUENZA IS NEAR

State Health Authorities Expect It During Next Two Months; Scattered Cases

Health authorities, not only in North Carolina, but throughout the country, are expecting an early recurrence of the epidemic of influenza which spread with such deadly results in September two years ago, and gain in the early months of the present year. Already numbers of cases have been unofficially reported from points in the State, but all of them are very mild in type and no deaths have been reported.

Before the epidemic was checked during the first outbreak, it was predicted that it would reappear the following year, and perhaps later in the fall than the first outbreak, and that the third winter would see a recurrence, then probably earlier in the season than the second. Thus far the predictions of medical authorities have been borne out in every particular, both as to the time of the re-appearance, the virulence of the type and the deadliness of the disease.

Discussing the matter, Dr. F. M. Register, of the State Health department, declared that he expected that the next few weeks would bring about a widespread epidemic, very mild in form, and with but relatively few deaths. He believes that the fact that it is apparently coming earlier will make it much easier to combat, and that patients will yield more readily to treatment than is the case when the epidemic comes in the cold winter months.

In Very Mild Form.

The recurrence of the disease, particularly in its milder form, brings no occasion for alarm, Dr. Register said. It is to be expected that there will be sporadic outbreaks for years to come, each less vicious than the preceding, until influenza will degenerate into nothing more than a severe cold, he continued. Many of the cases that have been heard of recently appear to be nothing more than deep colds, and with continued favorable weather, the entire epidemic may pass this fall with no more serious result.

The department has recently completed a compilation of the reports made of the two previous epidemics in the State. In September and October of the first year of the epidemic there were 225,000 cases reported to the board of health, and more than 13,000 deaths. During the January-February outbreak of the present year there were 76,308 cases reported with 2,902 deaths.

Commenting on the figures, Dr. Register pointed out the fact that during the second outbreak there were only a third as many cases, and the death rate was less than a fourth of the death rate in the first epidemic, and that coming at a time of the year when treatment of the disease was made under very much less favorable circumstances. He expects the death rate to be reduced to a minimum if the epidemic should assume major proportions this year.

Medical authorities are still somewhat in the dark as to what influenza really is, as much so as they were when it made its appearance on the Atlantic coast in September, 1918, and swept westward across the continent during the following three months. They recognize the disease when they see it, but not much more than that. They have come to regard the disease with less alarm than was the case two years ago, and in time it will probably disappear from medical experience as one of the unsolved mysteries of the profession.

Of ten average farmhouses in the United States, according to government figures, eight have no bathrooms.
