Library Notes

BY ALICE BRYAN
County Librarian

Among the new books added to the library is another copy of Norman Vincent Peale's book "A Guide to Confident Living." This book is one that is always passed from friend to friend before being returned to the library. The reader who gave the new copy of the book remarked that it was the best book she had ever read and that she had become "a one-woman campaigner" to get others to read it.

Sinclair Lewis' new novel will be of interest because it is different from the usual Lewis story. "The God-Seeker" is the story of the development of a young New England zealot who became in 1848 a missionary in frontier Minnesota. Aaron Gadd took a heroic part in the dangers and hardships of pioneer life and at the same time went through the spiritual, emotional and intellectual fires of religion as practiced in that day and place.

"Rustler's Bend" by Will Ermine—When a roving prospector struck a vein of gold-bearing quartz, violence and lawlessness returned to peaceful Rock Creek.

"West of the Rimrock" by Wayne D. Overholser—Story of young Murdo Morgan, who rides back to the valley where he was born, planning to settle the land with homesteaders. Before he can succeed, he must fight it out with the murderous Clancy outfit who had killed his brothers and taken over the valley.

"Overcoat Meeting" by George Agnew Chamberlain—"Drive only forty miles south from Philadelphia into New Jersey and you will be in country as wild today as it was before railroads and the automobiles brought the city to the backwoods. Against this authentic pioneer setting the author of "Scudda-Hoo, Scudda-Hay!" tells of Jeddo and Mit, their feuding families, their tempestuous romance and the amazing comeback of their trotting horse, Spring Hanover. Colorful story of backwoods harness racing founded on the stamina of horse and man."

"Cutlass Empire" by F. van Wyck

Mason—The story begins with Henry Morgan's flight from Cromwell's England and his arrival as a castaway on the shores of a Caribbean island, and it ends with his return to England in chains. One thread of the fabulous story follows Morgan's hugely successful career as a buccaneer and his hatred of the Spaniards; another, weaving among thrilling accounts of his battles, in the story of his great loves.

"The Nancy Flyer" by Ernest Poole—"Bob Gale, owner of the 'Nancy Flyer,' a beautiful Concord coach, was the fastest whip in the New Hampshire hills. Nancy Hubbard was the proprietress of the Bull Moose Tavern. Only the 'Flyer' came between them, and this is the story of Bob and Nancy, and of how the 'Flyer' played an important role in their lives."

"The Slender Reed" by H. H. Lynde—Story of a woman, dominated by her husband, held in mild contempt by her daughter, but who, after her husband dies, finds her own way to security and the discovery of her real self.

"Emily Will Know" by Nancy Rutledge—To Emily Severn her husband Chad was, after three years of marriage, still the loving, companionable, glamorous gentleman for whom she had cast aside a devoted father and his immense fortune. To her father, Chad was an ageing failure. When Chad walked away from his father-in-law's deathbed, with the words "Emily Will Know" ringing in his ears and heart, inevitably he began to plan a second murder.

The magazines given to the bookmobile by Mrs. W. A. McCall will be enjoyed by many readers.

Among the new names added to the registration files of the library: Harold McNeely, Jack Murray, Mrs. Mabel H. Payne, and Raye Yow.
