New Lilies and New Ways To Plant Them This Fall

Japanese lily bulbs will be back in full supply this fall, and with them new American varieties, so that lily fanciers may choose from a list larger than ever before available, to plant for next summer's flowers.

Fall planting is best, because most lily bulbs available in the spring were dug the previous fall, and spent the winter in cold storage. It is much better for them to be in the soil of your garden, where they can start spring growth as soon as the frost has left.

Plant breeders in this country have been working on lilies, and offer several hybrid types, which are claimed to be more adaptable to garden environment than older varieties, which are species, or wild forms, gathered in their native homes, and transferred to gardens without change. Those which have survived and can be grown with reasonable care in average garden soil include:

L. candidum, the Madonna lily, formerly grown by florists as the Easter lily; L. regale, the royal lily, white with pink markings; L. speciosum, a Japanese variety of which two varieties are common, rubrum, white marked with rose, and album, all white; L. henryi, known as the yellow speciosum; L. tigrinum, var. splendens, the tiger lily; L. tenuifolium, the coral lily of Siberia; L. auratum, the Japanese gold-banded lily; L. elegans, showy Japanese lily, including red and yellow; L. testaceum, fragrant buff-colored flowers growing 3 feet high; L. martagon, purple flowers spotted with black.

American growers question the wisdom of planting lily bulbs deeply. Lillium candidum and its hybrids should barely be covered with soil, they say. Others are best planted so that the soil above the bulb is no deeper than the bulb itself. Thus a bulb measuring four inches from top to bottom should have four inches of soil above it. If this is not deep enough, the roots will pull the bulb deeper; while a bulb planted too deep can never rise to the right level.

More important than depth is the location, however. Lilies need a porous, well drained soil, sunshine and lots of moisture. A southern slope is ideal. Plant the bulbs upright, otherwise the stem may be weak.

American growers also are in agreement that the old idea that lilies should not be fed with commercial plant food is obsolete. They respond well to modern commercial preparations, and show no injury, provided it is used with the usual precautions. In preparing a bed or border for lilies, spade under a complete balanced plant food, using 4 pounds for 100 square feet. In planting bulbs singly, mix a teaspoonful of plant food with soil at the bottom of the hole, and cover it with an inch of fresh soil before setting the bulb.
