

BRUCE BARTON

Writes of "THE MASTER EXECUTIVE"

Supplying a week's inspiration for the heavy burdened who will find explication in the experiences of "The Man Nobody Knows."

"RENDER UNTO CAESAR"

Teacher, we know that you speak the truth, said the jealous Pharisees and Herodians, "and that you don't care anything about the authority or office which a man holds. You treat them all alike, and speak your mind bluntly because you get your thoughts direct from God."

"Now, tell us, is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or not?" Very clever, gentlemen, very clever, indeed. If Jesus answers that it isn't lawful, you will have the record of his reply in Herod's hand in an hour; and instantly he will be under arrest for propagating rebellion against the Roman power; if he answers that it is lawful, he will lose his popular following. Because the people hate the Romans, and dodge the taxes at every turn . . . very, very clever.

Looked at them with frank contempt, as if to say, "Do you really think I am quite as simple as all that?"

"Somebody lend me a coin," he exclaimed. An eager listener dug into his pocket and produced it.

"Whose picture is that?" he demanded. "Whose name?"

They began to be uneasy. The shrewdest suspected that the path was leading toward the precipice, yet there was no escape. They must answer. "Caesar's," they replied.

"Very good," said he ironically. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

Another repulse for the best legal talent in the city . . . another good laugh for the crowd . . . another story to tell in the taverns, in the Temple court, in the market place . . . wherever the common folk crowded together. . . . Says the narrative describing the defeated questioners "they marveled greatly at him. . . . and in another place . . . and no man after that dared ask him any question."

Every objection had been turned back upon the objectors; every trap had sprung upon the fingers of those who set it. No argument was left for them except the final one which is always a confession of failure. They had the brute force on their side. They could not stand against his thinking but they could, and did, nail him on the cross.

Not in time, however. Not until his work was finished. Not until he had trained and equipped a force which would carry on with double power because of the very fact of his death. . . . Every year in our country there are thousands of conventions — political, charitable, business. Most of them are a waste. They are conducted on the false assumption that over-selling and exaggeration are potent forces — that the energies of men respond most powerfully to promises of easy victory and soft rewards. The great leaders of the world have known better.

GALL-STONES

If you are past middle age, fat, "tubby" and — sedentary, you are a likely candidate for gall-stones, and especially if constipated and neglected diet, bowels and exercise. Then, if you eat too much.

I don't see as many gall-stone cases as I used to — not at all; people are becoming educated.

Not all gall-stones announce themselves by the severe pain of passing through the bile-duct; I once did an autopsy on an 80-year-old patient — a woman — who had carried over seventy large stones in the gall-bladder for years, without knowing she had them!

These concretions are caused by long-retained bile in the gall-bladder; they form somewhat like sugar forms in the bottom of the syrup-pitcher that is little used. Prevention means — to keep the bile moving; exercise helps to do this. A plain, nutritious diet, and temperance in eating is another aid.

Plenty of green vegetables, the "leafy" sorts are of use in the diet. Lettuce, spinach, dandelion greens, well-prepared cabbage, coltslaw, and such.

I am partial to the coarser breads at least once daily. People have told me sweet milk and eggs "make them bilious." I think they are mistaken; the term "biliousness" is so old it has whiskers — like all pious old frauds, it means always something else.

Best remedy for threat of gall-stones. Phosphate of Soda — I mean, best family remedy; it is harmless. Should be taken every morning before breakfast, enough to keep the bowels moving comfortably. A simple, well-tyed remedy is safer in the household than a car-load of exploited "specifics" that spell quackery in big letters.

Three Poultry Troubles Are Seasonal in Spring

During the heavy production period of the spring there are three seasonal poultry troubles which cause considerable concern to bird owners. These are prolapsis, blood spots in eggs, and bumble foot.

"For the past three weeks we have had daily letters about one or the other of these troubles," says Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the State College poultry department.

"Prolapsis is always prevalent at this season especially among high-producing birds. This trouble is indicated by a portion of the oviduct extending from the vent and is caused by heavy, continued laying over a long period. It may be caused by the delivery of an exceptionally large egg. The condition is not contagious but causes much concern."

Dearstyne says that any bird suffering from prolapsis is immediately attacked by the other hens and will be killed unless removed from the flock. Attempts to wash the exposed part with a mild antiseptic solution will help and may prevent continued attacks but is not always successful. Isolation is best and if the case is severe, the bird should be placed on a grain ration and fattened for eating.

Blood spots in eggs also cause needless concern, Dearstyne says. This is caused by a small blood vessel rupturing while the egg is being formed. The condition is physical and is not contagious. Eggs with such blood spots are not unhealthy nor unsafe for eating. The only way to determine whether there are blood spots in eggs is to candle them before marketing.

Bumble foot may be caused by a bruise or a cut but the usual cause at this season is heavy production and a depletion of the tissue vitality of the feet. If it becomes chronic, there is nothing left to do but to fatten the bird for market or table. It is difficult to cure this trouble.

Josephus Daniels Praises Legion

Josephus Daniels, war-time Secretary of the Navy, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, and newly appointed ambassador to Mexico, in the following message highly praises the American Legion, and the stand the organization has taken in regard to the administration economy program.

"The repeal of the veteran's act, requested by the President, and the new law which gives the Chief Executive absolute power with few limitations over the affairs of the disabled, was followed by a pledge of loyalty from the Legion and an offer to aid the President in every possible way."

Mr. Daniels writes: "This country can never discharge the debt of gratitude . . ."

"The United States entered the World War. The American Legion seeks to carry on their patriotic spirit in the days of peace. Legionnaires recognize that the problems of peace call for the high wisdom and courage demanded in war. Organized devotion to the public weal is sorely needed in these critical days. The whole people look with confidence to the Legion to put devotion to country first as they did in 1917-18. They have been a bulwark to true Americanism, and in any hour when brave men are needed in peace or war, they are a sure defense against open or secret foes. I believe, with Secretary Baker, that 'the Legion is the greatest potential force for good in America.'"
