First Robeson County Club Picnic May Prove Turning Point For Co.

A crowd of women and men 600 or more strong, besides children, fairly representative of the progressive and intelligent citizenry of Robeson county, attended at Philadelphia last Thursday the first picnic of the Robeson County club, heard earnest, enlightening and inspiring addresses by former Governor A. W. McLean, Mrs. Jane S. McKimmon, State home demonstration agent, Mr. J. T. Lazar, boll weevil expert, Mrs. D. A. McCormick, prominent farm woman of the county, Miss Halie Prather and Mr. O. O. Dukes, county home and farm agents, partook of a superb barbecue and brunswick stew dinner, enjoyed social intercourse, and, after two sessions of speech-making reluctantly called it a day and with one voice proclaimed it one of the most profitable and delightful occasions ever participated in by the people of Robeson.

To say that the occasion was a success in every way is to express it mildly. It was a success beyond the fondest expectations of its promoters and bore eloquent testimony to the widespread and earnest determination of forward-looking citizens of Robeson to unite their efforts for the common good, to study conditions intelligently, profit by mistakes of the past and make Robeson county once more the prosperous section that nature intended. It was a crowd that faces the future with cheerfulness and hope but with full realization of the difficulties ahead.

Mr. John M. Brown, chairman of the Philadelphia school board, voiced the welcome of the community and invited all to feel at home. He thanked the committee for selecting Philadelphia of this first county-wide picnic of the club. Mr. W. K. Bethune of Howellsville township, pinch-hitting for Mr. J. F. Johnson of Fairmont, who could not be present, responded with appreciation for the opportunity of meeting in this splendid community and the fine cooperation given. At the close of the afternoon program Mr. Bethune again expressed appreciation for the cooperation that made the occasion such a success.

Mr. J. C. Lentz, of St. Pauls, vice president of the club, presided in the absence of Mr. H. A. McKinnon of Maxton, president, who was unavoidably prevented from attending on account of a case before the Supreme court in Raleigh. Mr. Lentz made an admirable presiding officer. He told of the organization of the club at a meeting to which the Rotary club of Lumberton invited a number of citizens from over the county some months ago, the club being formed as the result of suggestions made in an address on that occasion by former Governor McLean. The county is proud of McLean, he said, presenting him for the first speech, he has done much for the county, is interested in its welfare and sees the need of such an organization.

Mr. McLean was at his best and he did not mince words in telling his home-county folks that they are facing disaster unless farming methods are changed, but he held out the comforting assurance that by acting collectively the people of Robeson would become prosperous again, and on a surer basis. To this end, he said, looking about for some remedy for conditions that give him concern, he suggested the organization of a county club to bring the people together in the common purpose of working out a program for the betterment of the entire county, all for one and one for all. Conditions cannot be remedied by each man playing a lone hand, he said, but by organization great things can be done.

Mr. McLean reviewed changes that have taken place during the past ten years. Great progress has been made along educational lines, he said; cultural standards have improved and young people have a finer and larger opportunity to make a success in life.

"But the county has gone backward agriculturally in the last ten years," he said "there has been an almost complete change in agricultural conditions. The county is not going forward, it is not making progress, the people are not enjoying prosperity. There is a greater consumption of accumulated wealth than ever before; we are using up our investment in lands and buildings; there is a greater number of mortgages than ever before."

"It is discouraging," continued Mr. McLean. "Such lack of success cannot continue for any long period without jeopardizing all progress. I tried to think of some plan by which the people could band together. Nothing can be done by the individual alone. The only way to bring about a change is to appraise the difficulties and apply the remedy. Nothing can be done except by cooperation, concert of action. We must marshal public sentiment behind the home and farm agents."

"We have come to the time that, unless signs fail, if we don't give up cotton as our principal money crop every farmer will be bankrupt in a few years," said Mr. McLean, declaring that more people are in debt and farms mortgaged than there were in the '90s when cotton was selling for 4 and 5 cents a pound. "You cannot make money on cotton over a

"Devil-May-Care" By A. S. Roche Is A Thrilling Story

The story of a girl who married the man she hated in her desire to wreak vengeance upon him is told in a thrilling, exciting manner by Arthur Somers Roche in "Devil-May-Care," the serial novel which the Red Springs Citizen will publish starting October 31.

Do not neglect to read this story. It will furnish many thrills as it is full of tense moments, and the fine style of Arthur Somers Roche makes it particularly good reading. The story will be illustrated by the noted artist, Donald Riley.

Arthur Somers Roche, author of many popular short stories and a crop of more than successful novels, started out by being a lawyer. Born in 1883, in the town of Somerville, Mass., he showed an early penchant for the artistic life by scribbling on the fly-leaves of prayer-books and by being discovered in a bitterly contested game of marbles when he had been told to cut the grass.

After the usual education of reading, writing, arithmetic, and other important subjects, finished off with a course in law at Boston University. Mr. Roche engaged in the practice of law. But after eighteen months he left the grim solemnity of the bar, gavel-thumping judges and shivering defendants, for the free and varied career of a newspaperman.

Since 1910, he has contributed regularly to magazines. He enlisted during the war and served as captain in the Military Intelligence Division of the United States Army. Upon receiving his honorable discharge, he returned to his typewriter and has been thumping the keys ever since.

His novels are many, successful and charming. He is the author of "The Spect of Kings; Ransom; The Eyes of the Blind; Uneasy Street; Find the Woman; The Way of Faith; A More Honorable Man; The Pleasure Buyers; Devil-May-Care; Come to My House; and What I Know About You. He is co-author in the play, "The Scrap of Paper," produced in New York in 1917.

At the present time Mr. Roche lives in Darien, Conn. "No adequate remedy has been found for the boll weevil, and we can't compete with Oklahoma and Texas where they make cotton at a cost of eight cents a pound while it costs us 13 and 20 cents. With some people planting cotton is a disease of the mind; they will produce it when they know they are going to lose money." He said that a few years ago he planted 1,000 acres in cotton, this year he planted only 300 acres, and next year he will plant 100 acres or less.

"If it had not been for tobacco I don't know what would have become of us during the past few years," said Mr. McLean. "Farmers in the southern end of the county made $50 to $300 gross on an acre; those who made a high yield and good quality made money in spite of the price. Tobacco is one avenue of escape from cotton. Peanuts is another, and that crop is nearly fool-proof, like cotton."

"It is a reflection upon the intelligence of the younger generation if they continue to plant cotton," said Mr. McLean, urging the folly of trying to do the impossible.

"We are partially responsible for our condition," he continued; "we have not been using our thinkers. We ought to band ourselves together and agree on some constructing program. It has been demonstrated that new methods pay. If all join the club and act in concert we may be able to get somewhere. If we do not, our farms will be lost. We must produce more butter and chickens. Some farms do not produce enough milk for the babies. We can't go on in that way."

Mr. McLean scored the practise of buying western hay—hauling corn and hay in autos and going back home to make boll weevil cotton.

"Farmers ought to live as well as or better than they did formerly," he said. "but the only way to do it is to produce food and feed at home. We have been preached to along this line but some of us have not taken the advice." He told of a farmer who had. This farmer wanted
