L. E. Winters Awarded Coleman May Toss For Robins Tilt Against 32nd AC

Tournament Entries Being Received For August Round-Ro-bin At Robbins Park.

Hamp Coleman may be sent to the mound Sunday by the Red Robins for his first appearance in a Bird uniform since the end of the American Legian play if his arm is in good shape, Manager Tom Cope stated here today.

Opposing the Robins here will be the 32nd Army Corps team, one of the strongest service outfits ever brought to the local field, according to Mr. Cope. Emory Rudd, formerly with the Boston Red Sox will probably be the visiting pitcher. Pitcher Tracy of the Cardinals and Costeman, also a St. Louis player before Army days, and Cabreal of Louisville, are also on the squad, and were members of the Bragg allstar team which advanced to state championship play among service teams last week.

The Iron Horse Finds His Voice

Can one iron horse talk to another? Well, it looks like maybe so, and certain railroad men intend to soon find out for sure. As a case in point, the Seaboard Railway has requested permission from the Federal Com-munications Commission to install radio telephone equipment on its yard engines at Hamlet for experi-mental purposes. The Federal agency has already alloted certain frequencies which can be used just as soon as Washington flashes the green light on construction of enough plant to swing the job. And if the Hamlet tests are successful, others will be conducted elsewhere along the railroad in the near future.

Operations in the big Carolina rail Operations in the big Carolina rail old on or before December 31, 1947, center, where five Seaboard routes converge, would be divided into (1) 2-way communication between yard office and swifth engine and (2) a similar arrangement among three yard locomotives. Legion Plans Week Of Training For High School And Junior Players In August.

Les Plan a baseball school for players of this section pleted by the Charlie he American Legion high s are beit. Hall Pos Billy Laval, head iversity, of South coach of iversity, of South Carolina, h. tentatively engaged to cot. he school for a week during it was said last night.

The school v. be open to all high school players in this section, according to Fitz C. Jones, commander of the Legion post, and there will be no charge to any one. The school is an outgrowth of the past summer's activities in Junior base-ball, and is being held to give high school players, Robeson, Hoke, Bla-den and other counties a chance to learn the fundamentals of the game and the various players' positions under the tutelage of one of the outstanding baseball mentors of the

Mr. Laval, a four letter man from Furman university, is one of the leading coaches of the Southern Collegiate Conference and is also a player scout for one of the major league clubs. His appearance in Red Springs depends upon arranging a week when he would not have to be traveling to see games and scouting players in other parts of the South.

Mr. Jones stated that the Post had been in touch with the USC coach by telephone and that he was to notify the Post by tomorrow if he would be able to arrange his schedule for a week here, and the dates for the school would be set follow-ing Mr. Laval's decision.

The plans call for morning classes and demonstrations in the ABC's of the sport, and afternoons would be devoted to the grounding of the players in these fundamentals on the field at Robbins park. At the end-of the week players would be giv-en an opportunity to use the week's schooling during a two-game series to be played with an outstanding Junior team from Central of Western

North Carolina.

Mr. Jones stated that the past season's play in the Junior American Legion series had really sold the Junior baseball program to the folks of Red Springs, and that the local post planned to have an entry in the District play next season. This school is a part of the Post's plans to have a team that would go even farther in State competition than did the team of this year.

Both young lieutenants returned to their home lands within the past two weeks, and Lt. and Mrs. Martin arrived in Red Springs Satur-day afternoon. Lt. Thomson, who has been with the First Army in Europe, arrived in Washington Friday night, and after visiting his panay night, and after visiting his parents in Charlotte, they came to Red Springs this week, to give Mr. Bullock, as Lt. Martin expressed it, "his second shock in a week." However, he seems to be bearing up remark-ably well under his double shock!
