KICKERS HANDICAP!

Golfers Formally Open the Season Christmas Day.

Col. Bogey Was Not Upset by Scores
But Players Had No End of Exhilirating Pleasure.

Christmas day brought about the formal opening of the golf tournament season, one of many informal events which are to be added to the stated fixtures during the winter, and while the doughty Colonel Bogey was not seriously upset by the scores, the players had no end of exhilirating pleasure out of the contest.

The event was a "blind" or "kickers" handicap. Professional Donald J. Ross announced that the winning score would be between 85 and 95 inclusive, and players were supposed to give themselves sufficient handicap to make their net scores come between these figures. Few however, as the score will show, gave themselves sufficient number of strokes, only two finishing within the limit named.

Ninety-two was the figure drawn at the close of the contest and Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald of New York City, won with with 93 net with Mr. H. Eldridge of New York City, a close second with 94 net.

The prize was a handsome pewter stein, bought with the entrance fees of the players.
