THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT FOR 1903!

Event Marks Epoch in the History of Golf in the South.

Beckwith-Ward Match in the Championship Finals a Fitting Climax to a Great Event.

The United North and South amateur championship tournament for 1903, unquestionably takes its place as one of the important tournaments of the year; marking a new epoch not only in the history of golf at Pinehurst; but in the South, as well.

In the list of nearly sixty entries, many of the principal clubs and prominent amateurs of the country were represented, and interest in the event was not confined to the Village and the South, but extended throughout the country.

The weather of Saturday and Tuesday was absolute perfection, and Monday was not especially disagreeable because it might have been much worse. Throughout the course was in superb condition, the absorbent sand taking up every particle of moisture almost as soon as it fell, and the arrangements were carried out with the precision of clock-work.

An immense crowd manifested what might well be termed a personal interest in the tournament from first to last, and close and hard fought matches were features of the event; the Beckwith-Ward match in the championship finals, coming as a fitting climax to a great event.

The tournament in every important particular was a brilliant success which will spread the fair name of Pinehurst far and wide, and one does not need to be much of a prophet to foretell what the tournaments of 1904, 1905 and 1906 will be!

Women's Championship Replete with Close and Interesting Matches.

Twenty-hole Contest Between Miss Powers and Miss Bradbury is One of the Features of the Tournament.

The Women's Championship event was not unlike the men's in the number and importance of its entries, and from the qualification round down through to the finals, it was replete with close and interesting matches.

In the qualification round, Mrs. M. D. Paterson won the gross score cup with 101, and Miss Powers the net score cup, with 96, finishing only a single stroke behind the gross score of Mrs. Paterson.

Miss Powers' match with Miss Bradbury was not only the event of the women's championship, but one of the features of the tournament as well. At the turn Miss Powers was four down, but coming in she rallied and gradually cut this score down hole by hole, until at the seventeenth she was even up. The eighteenth and nineteenth holes were halved and the twentieth hole was won by a single stroke. The interest of the immense gallery was intense, and with the final victory came tremendous applause.

The detailed score tells the story of the battle.
