Messengers.

These flowers come to wish you well,
For you my loving thought to tell.
When they have whispered in your ear,
The tender words I'd have you hear,
They'll close their eyes and go to sleep;
The flowers you'll lose—the message keep.

—Margaret May.

THE CAUSE of consolidation of schools continues to win favor in high places. It is now advocated by every state superintendent of public instruction of the South, by an overwhelming majority of county superintendents, by most teachers, and by a goodly number of those who have children in the schools.

Within the last two years the majority of the governors of the states have urged legislation to prevent the further subdivision of schools and to increase consolidation. In Tennessee, both Governor McMillin in his last message, and Governor Frazier, in his first message to the legislature, urged such legislation in the strongest terms. Governor Frazier says:

"My investigation leads me to the conclusion that in many counties of the state there are too many school districts and too many schools. The school fund is scattered among numerous small and weak schools, thus limiting the capacity and effectiveness and shortening the term of all. A small school is always a weak school; it has not the vital and growing power that numbers give.

"One of the crying needs of our public school system in Tennessee is reasonable and practical consolidation. The tendency in our state to multiply rural schools so as to locate a public school near to every man's door has caused a great waste of public money and has seriously impaired the efficiency of our public schools. We need, above all things, stronger schools and longer school terms."

THE FITFUL GROPINGS of the hour seem to portend some great physical discovery; greater and more far reaching, possibly, than any yet made. The alchemists' theory of the transmutation of the elements was long ago discarded, but the work of recent years has pointed more and more to the unity of matter, and the world's investigators are now engaged in a restless struggle to trace matter and energy to their source. Already we are told vaguely, that the form of energy known as electricity, is made up of solid atoms and that the atoms of matter may be aggregations of these electric atoms. The motions and shapes of atoms are being called upon to explain not only light and heat, but gravitation, cohesion, repulsion, and chemical and vital phenomena; and it can hardly be doubted that the new laboratories of extreme heat and extreme cold, with the lately acquired acquaintance with new radiations, must soon lead a step nearer to a solution of many of the mysteries of the universe.

THE INFLUENCE on health of various metals used in the household, especially in contact with food, has been the subject of a German report by Prof. Lehmann. Lead and lead preparations are found to be positively injurious and dangerous; household poison by mercury is too rare for notice; and copper, zinc and tin are but slightly poisonous—less so than is often supposed. Silver, aluminum, iron and nickel may be regarded as absolutely harmless.

Golfing Song.

Tho' rain may fall or wind may blow,
Or pleasant be the weather,
A happy fellowship we know
Who tramp the links together.

The summer sun is in our eyes,
Our cheeks are red as roses,
And where the golden sunshine lies
There's sunburn on our noses.

For tho' it rain or tho' it blow,
Or pleasant be the weather,
The heart of happiness we know
Who tramp the links together!

—Louise Morgan Sill in Harper's Magazine.

siderable historical interest, entitled "Stories of Old New Haven." The author, Ernest H. Baldwin, Ph. D., is a lecturer in History at Yale University, and a native of New Haven. He is a descendant of one of the original settlers of Quinnipiac, and has spent most of his life amongst the scenes which he describes. Dr. Baldwin has made many contributions to historical literature, the most important being the biography of Joseph Galloway, the Loyalist Politician.

Bounty on Foxes Offered.

The Pinehurst General Office, will pay one dollar for the ears of every fox caught within ten miles of Pinehurst.

All persons wishing to secure this bounty, within the next twelve months, can do so by presenting the skins to Neil Shaw, at Pinehurst. The skins can be retained after the ears have been removed.

BEAUTIFUL COLONIAL HOME

Located in one of the most attractive suburbs of CHARLOTTE, comprising large, well shaded lot, 200x500 in size, containing ten large rooms, besides pantries, bath room, etc., is

OFFERED FOR SALE

There is a large garden, with choice variety of fruit at the rear of the house; also stable with room for two horses, carriage etc.

The street car line has recently been extended directly to the property, and city water and sewerage connections have also been made. The property fronts on one of the finest macadam roads in Mecklenburg County, and is only seven minutes distant from the centre of the city by car line or fifteen by carriage.

There is no more attractive home about Charlotte than this, and it would be hard to find one more attractive or with such a combination of conveniences in the South.
