SOME BOOKS I HAVE READ

ON THE CROSS.

A Romance of the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

"On The Cross", a romance of the Passion Play at Oberammergau, by Wilhelmine von Hillern and Mary J. Safford, published by Drexel Biddle, Philadelphia, is to say the least, a remarkable book. The impression it makes may differ in accordance with the temperament of the reader, but the strength, vividness and interest of the volume cannot be denied. It is possible that the story could have been told in less space and interest may lag until well along in the book, but when the reader once enters into the story, it is with regret that it is laid down unfinished. The book deals with the Passion Play, and gives a vivid description of it, and there are striking pictures of the people and the characters. With this is interwoven a strange love story. The volume is daintily bound in brown, with a cover design in gold, blue and black, embodying the passion flower. There are numerous illustrations.

A Book for Golfers.

"The Magic Mashie and Other Golfish Stories," by Edwin L. Sabin, published by A. Wessels, New York city, is a book especially designed for golfers, a volume of fourteen short stories all based upon golf or golfers, with a tinge of love, romance, or excitement, delicately interwoven. Perhaps most weird of the series is "A Spector of the Links". "The Long Game" is decidedly unique and so utterly improbable that one is almost tempted to believe portions of it. All in all the book is one that golfers will enjoy possessing and which will afford entertainment from cover to cover. The book is effectively bound in deep green with cover design of crossed golf clubs and golf balls in red and white.

Concerning Andrew Jackson.

Drexel Biddle, Philadelphia, announces the publication of a book by Alfred Henry Lewis, by the middle of May. The story deals with the positive day of Andrew Jackson, and is warm with love, and strong with politics of that forceful sort which fell forth between Jackson and Calhoun, with his followers, over secession, nullification and state rights. The volume will be illustrated by Henry Hutt, and the frontispiece was posed by a reigning beauty, the daughter of a governor. Mr. Lewis is well-known as the writer of the "Wolfville" short story series.

The Real Benedict Arnold.

A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, will shortly issue "The Real Benedict Arnold," by Charles Burr Todd, a companion volume to this author's "True Aaron Burr," which was one of the successful books of last season.

In the present work, while not condoning Arnold's treason, Mr. Todd, emphasizes his invaluable services to America, and shows conclusively that he four times saved the cause of the Colonies. Mr. Todd also shows that it was the influence of Arnold's wife and his fear of losing her should her treasonable correspondence with the British officers be discovered, which induced him to betray his country, and not the motives generally ascribed.

The Stumbling Block.

A novel of more than ordinary interest is promised soon by Messrs. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, in "The Stumbling Block" by Edwin Pugh. One who has read the MS. writes: "The whole story is clever to a degree. The originality of conception, the quality of atmosphere imparted to each changing scene, and the very clear and effective analysis of character are very striking and unusual."

Blenner's Types of Beauty.

The Abbey Press, New York city, has just published a handsome volume, "Blenner's Types of Beauty." Mr. Carle J. Blenner is well-known as a portrait painter, not only in this country, but in London, where a few seasons ago, he gave an exhibition opened by H. R. H., the Duke of Cambridge. He has exhibited for several years at the Salon, and his work received honorable mention at the World's Fair and the Pan-American Exposition. This reproduction in book form, of some of the artist's most popular paintings, should prove of interest to art lovers in general.

Wreaths of Song.

The Abbey Press, New York, will issue shortly, a collection of religious and philosophical poems entitled "Wreaths of Song," by the Rev. T. J. O'Mahony, D. D., of All Hallows College, Dublin, Ireland. The author gives many evidences of the poetic genius which made his uncle, Father Prout, famous.

Stories of old New Haven.

The Abbey Press, New York city, will publish soon an illustrated book of con-
