

MATCH PLAY ROUNDS RAPID!

Brilliant Golf and Low Medal Play Scores the Rule Throughout.

Work of Edwin A. Freeman and C. B. Corey Stands as Some of Finest Golf Ever Seen Here.

NEVER HAVE a more hotly contested series of matches been played than those which led up to the final rounds in the big tournament. To be sure the fight for the right to play in the finals for the Championship trophy was the feature of the tournament, but the battles in not only each of the four divisions, but the consolation events as well, were many of them, bitterly contested from start to finish and a number required additional holes for a decision.

Brilliant golf was the rule and never have lower medal play scores figured in a tournament here. In this particular Thursday's play was conspicuous, five of the matches including cards ranging from seventy-three to eighty-three. Among the most brilliant of these were the matches played by young Edwin A. Freeman of the Montclair Club, New Jersey, against Thomas G. Stevenson of the Brookline Country Club, Mass., and Walter J. Travis, and Charles B. Corey of the Oakley Country Club, Watertown, against A. E. Lard of the Columbia Country Club, Washington and J. W. Johnson of the Ardsley Club, New York.

The total medal play scores for the day of these players, were one hundred and fifty-two for Freeman, and one hundred and fifty-five for Corey.

The matches stand for some of the finest golf ever seen here, and the subjoined cards tell in detail the story of the contests.

BECKWITH'S DEFEAT

The surprise of the week was the defeat of T. Sterling Beckwith of the Cleveland Country Club, by J. W. Johnson of the Ardsley Club, New York, in the second round of the Championship. Beckwith was the winner of last years Championship and he holds an amateur record for the course at seventy-one. In view of this fact, and his recent achievements, he was generally regarded as a dangerous rival of Travis and a match between him and Corey to decide who would play in the final rounds of the Championship, was regarded as a certainty.

Johnson, however, was in excellent form and Beckwith was not at his best, and a stymie on the eighteenth hole won the match for the Ardsley player by a single stroke.

The cards in detail:

Johnson	5 4 4 6 4 5 5 4 5-42
Beckwith	4 4 3 3 4 6 7 3 4-38

THE DENNY-POTTER CONTEST

The match between F. H. Denny of the Allegheny Country Club, Pittsburg and Dr. A. C. Potter of the Oakley Country Club, Watertown, Mass., in the second round for the Holly Inn cup was close enough to be hair lifting. Nineteen holes and a single stroke, being necessary to decide it, and the players finishing with medal play scores of ninety-two and ninety-three, respectively.

The War of the Letters.

The consonants and vowels
Once had a bitter fight,
And when they joined in battle
Kept at it day and night.
The consonants were Russians,
The vowels Japanese:
The names of their commanders
Were spelled somewhat like these:
Pqrfzmsktvch!!!
Oeiua!
