My Den.

I've a "den" that's all my own,
That the maid must let alone,
Though it be in disarray,
Thus the maid must let it stay.

Pens are lying everywhere;
No one's moved the old arm chair;
Manuscript is scattered o'er
Desk and table, couch and floor.

Pipes are where I put them last;
Papers, too, where they were cast,
And the carpet doth display
Ashes that have missed the tray.

Thus I'd always have my "den,"
But, alas! like other men,
I've a wife who grieves to see
That I can thus happy be.

That my ways her patience tries
I can gather from her sighs,
And at times, in sheer despair,
She invades and cleans my lair.

I can bar the serving maid,
But my wife is not afraid;
She "arranges" now and then
Book and paper, chair and pen.

Woe is me! In such a case
Everything is in its place;
Order doth my wife create,
Leaving me disconsolate.

Things are then concealed from me,
For they're where they ought to be;
I'm in worst of human plights
When my "den" is "put to rights."

—Brooklyn Eagle.

When Hearts Are Not Trump.

Don't ask me, dear, to smoke no more,
For while I smoke I dream, my own;
And all the rings that upward soar,
Are halos for thy face alone.

Don't ask me not to drink a drop,
For when I drink I love thee most,
And after every sip I stop
To conjure thee another toast.

Don't ask me ne'er to take an oath,
For when I do, I swear by thee;
And sacred as a plighted troth
Is every oath that comes from me.

But if I must give up all three,
Ere I may claim thee for my wife,
I think I'd rather single be,
And stay a bachelor for life.

Quatrain.

The Past we never, never can regain,
The Present only can we make or mar;
Who nobly lives shall not have lived in vain,
And lo! at last, how sweet the treasures are!

MANY SEASON GUESTS HERE

They are Conspicuous Among Weeks
Arrivals at Various Hotels.

The Carolina Filling Rapidly—Record Breaking Week at The Holly Inn—Busy Days.

SEASON guests and many old and new friends were conspicuous among the great influx of guests which flocked in during the past week, bringing the midseason near at hand. While the advertising men's and midwinter tournaments occupied the bulk of attention, there were many pleasant social features, including the Tuesday evening banquet at The Carolina, and card parties at The Holly Inn and Harvard. The afternoon teas held at the Golf Club House each afternoon were much enjoyed, and trap and pistol shooting entertained the visitors. The regular dances at The Carolina and Holly Inn will begin this week and they are being anticipated with much pleasure by the younger set.

AT THE CAROLINA.

Large Company of Guests Assembled and House Filling Rap'dly.

The Carolina is filling very rapidly and a large and congenial company of guests is already assembled here. Social pleasures of a quiet and informal nature are being much enjoyed and bridge is extremely popular.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Shaw, and Mr. Hugh E. Shaw, Moosehead Lake, are among the week's arrivals. Mr. Shaw is one of Maine's leading business men, prominent in lumber operations and a director of the Mt. Kineo House Hotel Company and an intimate friend of General Hotel Manager H. W. Priest.

Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Crockett, and Masters Albert and Gilman Crockett, Buffalo, N. Y., returned for their second winter. Dr. Crockett is the Resident House Physician and he formed many pleasant acquaintances during his practice winter before last. Mrs. Crockett is a charming woman and a general favorite.

Mrs. Bryant B. Glenn, Sheffield, Mass., and Miss Ellen Carey, Buffalo, N. Y., are here for the winter, coming from The Harvard where they have been since early in November. Mrs. Glenn is an enthusiast over pistol shooting and active in social affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Barstow, East Orange, N. J., are here for their first visit and are delighted with Pinehurst.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan E. Lard, Washington, D. C., are among those who come from The Holly Inn. They have spent several seasons here, and have a wide circle of acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon H. Marlin of New Haven, Conn., spent the week here. Mr. Marlin is President of the Marlin Fire Arms Co., and an enthusiastic golfer.

Mrs. Marlin is a vivacious woman who formed many pleasant acquaintances, and her return will be anticipated.

THE SPECIAL CONTESTS.

Harrison, Hawley and Smedley Win
Attractive Trophies Offered.

The special contests, driving, approaching and putting, held in connection with the Advertising Men's Tournament, attracted much attention owing to the beauty of the trophies offered and practically all of the participants in the tournament entered for them.

The driving contest was won by Paul Harrison of Montclair, who took the Chicago Tribune trophy; the approaching contest by J. H. Hawley of New York, who secured the splendid kit bag contributed by P. F. Murphy of the Mark Cross Co.; and the putting contest by W. Smedley of Philadelphia, who won the superb stein given by the Golfers Magazine, of Chicago.
