NOVEL AND ENTERTAINING

Ring Exhibitions by Riding Master T. W. Mack's Pupils Much Enjoyed.

Horses and Riders Being Put Through Cavalry Exercises and Gymnastics—Other Work Planned.

THROUGH the efforts of Riding Master Thomas W. Mack, a two-hundred foot ring has been laid out at the west end of The Carolina in which instruction is being given, and the work done here by Mr. Mack's pupils is proving a novel entertainment feature for the villagers.

Mr. Mack's pupils include not only those who are just learning to ride, but others who have ridden much; and it is apparent that each class of pupils find the instruction equally fascinating. Mr. Mack not only teaches how to ride, but the fine art of riding as well, and he opens up to those who have been unfamiliar with this feature a new and most fascinating field.

"It's apparently a simple thing to open a horse's mouth straight," said Mr. Mack to THE OUTLOOK reporter the other evening, "but as a matter of fact, not one person in a hundred can perform this feat. And this single instance may be taken as an indication of what there is to learn about the riding, handling and care of a saddle horse. Few people realize that a single motion of the hand, body or foot influences the gait of a horse and his direction, or what an important part they play in the proper control of the animal."

Just at present Mr. Mack in his ring work is teaching the proper aids to produce the walk, trot and canter, in a horse, and to carry the animals through regular cavalry movements easily and properly. In this connection he is also instructing his pupils in cavalry gymnastics.

Contests, such as sabre exercises, cutting, pointing, etc.; tent-pegging, pulling a peg with a loop attached while riding past at full gallop; and lance exercises will also be arranged.

Driving saddle tandem is also being indulged in, and circling to the left and right, and the making of the figure eight at the walk, trot and canter, is one of the exercises.

Hurdles three feet and three feet six inches, each bushed six inches, are being built and jumping will be an interesting feature.

The interest in riding was never more pronounced here and an exceptionally large number of the visitors are enjoying it. A very pleasant feature is found in the large and merry parties of young people who make long trips, often spending the entire day, taking lunch in the country.

A Visit From the Bishop.

On Sunday next, February 19th, the Right Rev. J. B. Cheshire, Bishop of North Carolina, will be in Pinehurst, and will conduct a service at the Village hall at 4.45 p. m., or on the arrival of the trolley car from Southern Pines. The offering will be devoted to the cause of missions in his diocese.
