A Psalm of Farm Life.

Tell me not in broken measures
Modern farming does not pay,
For a farm produces chickens,
And the hens—do they not lay?

Eggs are high and going higher,
And the price is soaring fast;
Every time we get to market
It is higher than the last.

Not a coop but it produces
Every day an egg or two;
So each farmer gains his millions,
Even though the hens be few.

Every egg is very precious,
And the hens are held in awe;
When a hen begins to cackle
Then the farmer goes "Haw, haw!"

In the broad and busy farmyard
Struts a rooster now and then,
But the shrewd, bewhiskered farmer
Only notices the hen.

Trust no rooster, howe'er showy
Be the feathers in his tail;
Pay attention to the biddies,
And your wealth will never fail.

Lives of farmers all remind us
We may roll in wealth some day
If we hustle to the market
With the eggs our pullets lay.

—Chicago Chronicle.

Two Schools.

I put my heart to school
In the world where men grow wise;
"Go out," I said, "and learn the rule;
Come back when you win the prize."

My heart came back again,
"And where is the prize?" I cried.
"The rule was false, and the prize was pain,
And the teacher's name was Pride."

I put my heart to school
In the woods where wild birds sing,
In the fields where flowers spring,
Where brooks run cool and clear,
And the blue of heaven bends near.
"Go out," I said, "you are only a fool,
But perhaps they can teach you here."

"And why do you stay so long,
My heart, and where do you roam?"
The answer came with a laugh and a song—
"I find this school is home."

—Henry van Dyke in Atlantic Monthly.

Esopus—A Wintery Rondeau.

Esopus rests; beneath the snow,
The lawn and paths are snuggled low.
The porch, fair summer's rendezvous,
In quilt of white is sleeping, too;
And sparrows pass on tip of toe.

No hackmen joggle to and fro,
The trains upon the bank below
Don't stop—that last one simply flew!
Esopus rests.

So still it is, in fact, thoughts go
Back to election's afterglow;
The night the Judge, at fall of dew,
Announced, as counsel does when through:
"Esopus rests."
