BRILLIANT AND UNIQUE

Wax Works, Tableaux and Living Pictures Entertain Large Company.

Humor, Pathos and Art Happily Combined—Sly Pokes at Peculiarities and Conditions.

HE evening of tableaux, living pictures and wax works, given at the Village Hall, Thursday evening, in honor of the visiting golfers, ranks as the most entertaining and finished production of its character ever given here. Every detail was complete, changes went off with snap and dash, and a brilliant audience which taxed the capacity of the hall to its utmost, showed its hearty appreciation by enthusiastic applause and repeated encores.

The program embraced a happy collection of subjects, including popular advertisements of direct interest to the company gathered, depicting local sports with sly pokes at peculiarities and conditions, with just enough of the artistic added to give it brilliancy and character.

To attempt to dwell especially upon any one number would be idle for all were excellent, happily combining the humor pathos and art. A pleasing feature of the program was the music by The Carolina orchestra.

One of the most delightful numbers of the program and a fitting ending was the three-act presentation of James Russell Lowell's quaint poem, "The Courtin'" Mr. Aldice G. Warren reading the lines from behind the scenes.

Interest in the entertainment began at the auction sale of the box seats which graced the front of the hall, which took place at the Carolina, Tuesday evening, Mr. Robert Frothingham occupying the "box" with rare grace, and wonderful persuasive powers. The first box went to Mr. Chas. E. Fritz, Philadelphia, at $20. and none of the eight offered sold for less than fifteen dollars. Other box purchasers were Mr. Ralph Tilton, Mr. Kurtz Wilson, Mr. Winslow Mallery, Mr. S. Y. Ramage, Mr. Geo. L. White, Mr. F. J. Fahey, Mr. F. L. Colver.

Some forty dollars additional was also contributed to the fund which will be devoted to church and school work, making a total sum realized from the auction of $200.00

Too much credit cannot be bestowed on the active committee which had the arrangements for the entertainment in hand and on which Mrs. Montgomery A. Crockett and Mrs. Leonard Tufts were the leading factors. They were ably assisted by the Electrician, Farry.
