

THE BALMY BREEZES OF THE SUNNY SOUTH

Are laden with Health and Happiness for the Worn-out Wrestler with the Strenuous Life.

But you cannot repair wasted tissue or restore strength to jangled nerves with air and sunshine alone.

The stomach calls for a food that supplies body-building material in its most digestible form. Such a food is Shredded Whole Wheat.

It is made of the whole wheat, cleaned, cooked and drawn into fine porous shreds and baked. These delicate shreds contain all the nutritive elements of the whole wheat grain and are taken up and assimilated when the stomach rejects all other foods.

Shredded Wheat is made in two forms--BISCUIT and TRISCUIT. The BISCUIT is delicious for breakfast with hot or cold milk or cream, or for any meal in combination with fruit or vegetables. TRISCUIT is the shredded whole wheat cracker, crisp, nourishing and appetizing. Delicious as a toast with beverages or with cheese or preserves; also covered with Huyler Chocolate make a delicious confection.

NEW BOOKS FOR LIBRARY

Veritable Christmas Box Filled With Literary Dainties.

Volumes for Young and Old Adorned
With Dainty Wrappings of Silver and Gold.

THE annual invoice of new books has arrived at the Library, a veritable Christmas box, containing, so to speak, Christmas puddings filled with plums, confections of all kinds and what we suspect to be meat pies, though these are pretty well disguised by wrappings adorned with gold and silver.

An unusual number of well-known authors were ready with new books this fall. Stanley Weyman has "Chippinge Barnet," another English story of a century ago. "Sidney McCall's" new book, "The Dragon Painter," has her own name, Mary McNeil Fenollosa, on a title page for the first time. Phillpotts has joined with Arnold Bennett in writing "Doubloons," a thrilling detective story; E. Nesbit has departed from her usual course and written a charming story for adults, entitled "The Incomplete Amorisist"; Crawford, somewhat to his readers' disappointment, has left "Fair Margaret" to continue her career unrecorded and has told the tale of "A Lady of Rome"; Alice Prescott Smith, from whom good work can always be expected, furnishes a historical story in "Montlivet"; Mary Cholmondeley, whose "Red Pottage" excited so much interest a few years ago, now offers "Prisoners"; E. F. Benson, whose "Angel of Pain," according to many, was the finest novel for several seasons, has presented another strong, serious story, in "Paul"; Conan Doyle has written "Sir Nigel" to which his "White Company," so deservedly popular, may be considered the sequel. "Isabel Carnaby" has appeared again in a new role, for whoever expected to see her in "Subjection"?

These are a few of our well-known writers. There are others, less familiar to American readers, who deserve attention. "Joseph Vance," by William de Morgan, has won great praise across the water, the statement that it is "an ill-written biography," made on the title page, being as truly fiction as the tale itself. Another book which has made a sensation abroad is "The Life of John William Walshe," by Montgomery Carmichael. So cleverly is it done that the very elect were deceived into believing it a genuine biography. Well-known, too, in England, is William J. Locke, whose new story, "The Beloved Vagabond," has been hailed with delight. "Bess of the Woods" is the last work of the young clergyman, Warwick Deeping, who seems to have caught the glamour of old romance on his skilful pen. But why attempt the impossible task of speaking separately of many books when every one may taste for himself? The number of so-called "solid" books is small, but each one is worth attention. Chesterton's

"Charles Dickens" has made a sensation in London. E. V. Lucas, known by his last season's book, "A Wanderer in Holland" now confines his attention at home and wanders in London. Quiller-Couch writes charmingly "From a Cornish Window," and Nicoll furnishes the longed-for "Key of the Blue Closet."

It has long been the Librarian's opinion that many guests were not aware of the attempt made year by year to improve and enlarge the children's section of the Library. Not many books are added annually, but the dozen or more new volumes are selected with much care and an appreciation of this effort might help greatly in the future. Two of these children's books will be equally appreciated by older readers, as they certainly stand at the head of that style of story of which "Emmy Lou" was an example. These are "A Romance of the Nursery" and its sequel "Concerning Paul and Fiammetta" by Mrs. L. Allen Harker. "The Hill" is a story of Harrow, attempting to do for that school what "Tom Brown" has done for Rugby. Then there is an American school represented in "Harding of St. Timothy's."

Surely some of the children as well as older people, would consider a season's subscription to the Library as a welcome Christmas gift.
