

KEPT THE GALLERY GUESSING

St. Valentine's Tourney Match Play Rounds Full of Interest.

Of Close Matches There were Many and of Surprises a Few—Weeks
Play in Detail.

THE MATCH PLAY rounds of the St. Valentine's tournament kept the gallery guessing, interest culminating in Saturday's thirty-six hole finals. Of close matches there were many and of surprises a few, the finalists winning their positions by well fought battles.

The lion's share of attention was, naturally, bestowed upon the Newbold-Keates match, but the Clapp-Shethar match, in the third division consolation, and the Scofield-O'Connell contest, in the the fourth division consolation, were nearly as close, each requiring the thirty-seventh hole to decide them.

In the week's work Mr. Keates had the bulk of it cut out for him, meeting J. D. Foot of Apawamis, in the second round, and C. L. Becker of the Woodland Club, in the semi-finals; winning by one up from Mr. Foot, and by three and one from Mr. Becker.

Mr. Newbold also had opponents worthy of his steel, coming up against Harold C. Richard of the Princeton University team in the second round, and J. E. Porter of Pittsburg, in the semi-finals; defeating Mr. Richard by one up, and Mr. Porter by two and one.
