

COMPETITION IS VERY KEEN

Match Play Rounds of St. Valentine's Tourney Close Throughout.

Numerous Surprises Keep Interest
High and Big Crowd Close to Score Boards.

THE MATCH play rounds of the St. Valentine's tournament developed keen competition throughout all divisions, a large proportion of matches being won on the seventeenth and home greens, a goodly number requiring extra holes to decide them, one of which was carried to the twenty-second green.

Never has the field been more widely representative, a special feature being the large representation of Southerners together with liberal Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York State, and Western entries; the number of players who have figured prominently in important events, being large.

Numerous surprises awakened a sense of uncertainty and kept the interest of the big crowd which thronged the Club house in close proximity to the score boards and interested onlookers upon the course, Saturday's finals being the climax of a great week.
