

FROG RETRIEVES GOLF BALLS

(Concluded from page 1.)

"Presently the frog rose before me, bowed and gurgled: 'Must-go-hum,' and a sense of sorrow crept over me.

"'Sorry old chap,' I replied, 'but you must let me do something for you in return for your kindness.'

"The bright eyes lighted with pleasure. 'Jug-o-rum!' was the response and, strange it may seem, his meaning suddenly dawned upon me. Mr. Bull Frog wanted something besides water to drink; a very natural desire.

"'You shall have it tomorrow night,' I replied, lighting a cigarette, 'till then, good night,' and I bowed gravely.

"'Smoke-um-sum,' was the reply as my salutation was returned, and the extended hand left no room for doubt as to its meaning.

"I passed over the smoking roll and placing it between his lips, the frog jumped into the pond and swam swiftly towards the inlet, his head held high above the water, the blue smoke curling away behind him.

"Stooping, I spread the balls out in piles of a dozen each. Fourteen piles in all and two over; nearly all of them in perfect condition. Something like seventy-five dollars, I estimated, in return for one cigarette and a promised jug of rum. Gee!

"But the problem was to get them to the hotel. My pockets would surely hold a fair share, I figured; the rest I could hide in the bushes beside the old rosin tee.

"I stooped. Suddenly the piles seemed to all run together, becoming one monster ball which I grasped and tried to lift, but which kept dragging me down, down!

"Then I awoke to find myself half out of bed, head downward, with my arms tightly clasped around a pillow. A loud knocking on the door greeted me. 'It's eight o'clock, sir,' said a voice, 'and Mr. Smith says to tell you that you are to meet him at the first tee at nine.'"

The Annual Christmas Trees.

The usual Christmas trees for the white and negro children, to be held at The Harvard, Monday and Tuesday evenings, are anticipated as a feature of the week to come. Guests are invited to attend the exercises connected with the tree for the negro children, but the tree for the white children will be private in its character.

Subscriptions to the fund have been generous, but additional sums can be utilized. Money may be left at The Holly Inn desk or with Mrs. H. W. Ormsbee at the Hale cottage.

Pinehurst's Santa Claus.

Pinehurst's Santa Claus, Express Agent L. R. Richardson, just at the present time, is the most popular man in the Village, and everybody is looking for him. A genuine Holiday smile he wears and extra hours are a pleasure because he is giving pleasure to others.

MISS KATE C. HARLEY.

Pinehurst Golfer Winner of Highest American Honors.

Throughout the entire year Pinehurst golfers are now in the public eye, new honors coming to them annually, but none more gratifying than the winning of the United States Women's championship by Miss Kate C. Harley of Fall River, Mass., whose visit here is pleasantly remembered by a large circle of acquaintances.

Miss Harley, who was playing in excellent form while here, has improved rapidly during the past few years, gradually forging to the front rank among members of the fair sex who annually compete for the highest golf honors in the gift of America.

With a former world's champion, an open champion, a western champion, and a dozen other important wins, Pinehurst's colors now float throughout the land high up with other championship pennants.

EVIDENCE OF INTEREST.

Mr. M. D. Fink Sends Outlook Check for Children's X-mas Fund.

Mr. M. D. Fink of New York, whose long sojourn here last winter is pleasantly remembered by a large circle of acquaintances, in remitting for subscription to THE OUTLOOK also enclosed a check for five dollars to be credited to the Children's Christmas Fund, evidence of kindly interest in the welfare of the Village which is much appreciated by the committee in charge.

In this particular Mr. Fink establishes a precedent which should become general and for every dollar added to this subscription means happiness in homes which would not know of it but for the thoughtfulness of Pinehurst's guests. THE OUTLOOK will be glad to receive all such subscriptions and hopes that the practise may become general.
