

RARE DAYS IN THE OPEN

December Visitors Revel in Delight of Glorious Air and Sunshine

Many Come and Few Depart as the Old Year Speeds on to Greet
Nineteen-Eleven

IN THE DELIGHT of rare days of glorious sunshine and pure air which thrills to the finger tips, Pinehurst has spent the week in The Open, every moment occupied with the months stretching away before, holding new pleasures in store. Old and new friends join those already here and with few departures, the colony grows apace as the old year speeds on to meet, greet and say good-bye to nineteen-ten. Riding, driving, motoring, golf, tennis and shooting all claim devotees; social affairs, informal in their character, combining happily.

ON BRITISH GOLF COURSES

which are constantly played by the "big four" and others, the American professionals would be able to hold their own with the best British players, and I believe it is the high standard of play set by the British professionals that has brought the play of their great amateurs to its present high level.

After St. Andrews, I went to London and visited the Mid-surrey course. This is considered one of the best inland courses, but is very flat and would be very uninteresting if it were not for the admirable way in which it is bunkered. The greens are very fine, but not superior to the best greens on this side of the water.

Then home to Dornoch. Modesty forbids me saying more than it is the most beautifully situated links in the world and that no American golfer should omit to go there, where he will find the best golf, a royal welcome and no rabble.

—DONALD J. ROSS.

NOTE—In connection are printed four pictures typical of hazards on the local course, with which interesting comparison may be made with views of the Dornoch course on page seven.
