

is there than to say that merely because we know of only one kind of body, that in God's great universe of which we know so little, there are no other forms?

There is every reason to believe in the Resurrection of Christ. In the first place, because it is testified by men who had every opportunity of seeing and knowing and whose veracity was tested by the most tremendous trials. In the second place, because of the marvelous effect it has had on the world. As a moral phenomenon the spread and mastery of Christianity is without a parallel.

The Resurrection gives dignity and inspiration to life. We not only have possibilities of development here that are limitless, but we are making character here that shall fit us for our truest development in the life to come.

As Dr. Robinson said in Westminster Abbey on Easter, 1903: "The Church believes in the Resurrection of Christ today because she has always believed in it. If all the documents which tell the story of the first Easter Day should disappear, the Church would still shout her Easter praises, for she is older than the oldest of her documents and from father to son, all through the centuries, she has passed on the message of the first Easter morning: 'The Lord is risen indeed.' The Church believes in the Resurrection because she is the product of the Resurrection."

THERE'S TROUBLE BREWING

of drawing the contract for annexation of California to the United States, owing to conventions then existing, was unable to include Lower California in the deed, but in 1848 he foresaw the danger in our Southern boundary and to our strategic lines with which we today are confronted. Lower California, this national vermiform appendix of the United States, has become inflamed by the presence of a foreign body, and this national appendix must be operated upon promptly. The Panama Canal, our present and prospective Asiatic trade interests, as well as the integrity and safety of our Western coast itself, demand no further minimizing of the menace in respect thereto. Peace and safety are in sight by means of the strong hand, and all citizens should support the President in his tactical policy as outlined by his military procedure and should now recognize the actuality of conditions on the Pacific Coast.

"No alarmist, no war scare, nor any coward has standing in the United States in this or any emergency. There is a time for supreme silence and also a time when silence is supine weakness, as there is also a time to speak out for peace, order and safety. This President Taft has done along the Mexican border most emphatically and instructively. The way to conquer conditions is to meet them. Conditions must be seen in order to intelligently meet and conquer them.

"If conditions in Mexico are proved to be as remote from the conventions of established order and civilization as they are reported to be, and if intervention was ever justifiable, it is, perhaps, justified today upon these grounds and in the interest of humanity, independent of protection of financial interests of the United States or other reasons of state.

"I stand for peace first, last and always, and in any event, and as the lesson of events, I believe it to be incumbent upon us, for national protection (and this should become the determined policy of the United States) to assume a protectorate, at least, over Lower California and outlying provinces; if they should not be occupied and annexed to the United States against any and all comers at whatever cost and in the broad interest of peace and safety."
