"TIS GOOD TO BE HERE"

Mr. Cummings Returning Notes Great Progress at Pinehurst

ALL WHO can escape the rigors of our northern climate, and vegetate even for a time, in Pinehurst, released from the duties of society and habitual labors, ought to do so. The call of the south and especially of Pinehurst, when it once permeates the blood, is irresistible, and it is instructive and interesting to note, the quite uniform sentiment "that it is good to see Pinehurst and old friends again" and to find Pinehurst, marching steadily forward to greater victories.

The noticeable improvement, in the fair greens and turf of both the No. 1 and No. 2 courses, over two years ago, speaks well for the choice of the Bermuda grass, in the first instance and the skill evidenced in its virility. In California much time and expense is spent in eradicating it tion, must be formed learned and cultivated, early and often, or in later years it could not be formed or enjoyed at all. That success in business and the professions spells (frequent) relaxation from the killing demands.

There are rewards, in life far greater than those obtainable at the grindstone of business and the professions, and the "lure of the open" the woods and the fields, is but the demand of nature, for release from the unnatural mad-pace which dwarfs and stunts and kills early and unfaillingly. Men discover a congeniality and companionship in men, who each for a time, lay aside the business and professional atmosphere and seek the green spots, for rest and relaxation, often not otherwise discoverable.

Golf was perhaps primarily created, to teach the modern man the ancient delight of walking! This power has been largely lost, in this lazy age of mechanical propulsion, of the automobile, steam and electric cars and now of the aeroplane, from the lawns, because of its turning white and disfigurement, while here this quality is secondary, to its adaptability and perfect surface alignment.

It seems as if the shrubbery had doubled in height and growth during this time and that the grand long leaf pines never looked more attractive in their added splendor.

The tasteful modern cottages recently constructed, the fine avenues laid out, and the connecting "good roads," which are soon to materialize into practical and delightful arteries, connecting the north and the south, all hold out promise, that but the beginning is, as yet made, and that Pinehurst is to reap a still greater harvest of its good sowing.

Recreation is one of the great enterprises of the United States and men are but waking up to its personal and capitalistic value. In old times, men shook their heads, in disapproval of valuable time and energy, wasted in such investment and in recreation and especially in so childish games, as golf seemed then to be! Many other wiser men, discovered (some too late) that the habit of recrea-and yet remains the best of all. For golf, is a possession which once acquired, cannot be bought borrowed, or stolen, but is the visible expression of a man's innate skill and science, which has been brought to the surface, as a practical force, and only after years of concentration upon it, in patient persevering and indomitable labor. To include then, such a victory, in the list of childish amusements or wasted time, is only comparable to choosing the regions of snow and ice, instead of escape from them.

Time is not lost nor money wasted, which is devoted either to capitalizing and developing Pinehurst's and eighteen hole golf courses; or by those who are wise enough to give time and strength, to relaxation and enjoyments, of what is offered here, for their better and stronger growth and enjoyment, mentally and physically.

That's the song of the trap, and its rhythm brings supreme pleasure to every devotee of the great American sport

TRAP SHOOTING

The most healthful and fascinating sport on earth. Makes a strong appeal to the man and woman with red blood in their veins. Affords all the pleasurable excitement of hunting without its attendant discomforts and regrets. Keeps the experienced hunter from getting rusty and soon turns the novice into an expert shot because of the opportunity for regular practice.

Trap shooters are the best of fellows, and the good natured competition gives an added zest to the lure of the gun.

If you're already a trapshooting enthusiast, of course you're using one of the old reliable DuPont brands of Smokeless Shotgun Powders.
