FOX HOUNDS JOIN GOLF PLAY

Spot Mr. Johnson at Critical Moment and Retire Reluctantly

Mr. Johnson's match with Mr. Keating in the Holiday tourney, was not without its amusing difficulty, the incident occurring on the twenty-second green. Mr. Johnson who was "away," took his stance for the approach putt, on which hung great responsibility, just as the advance guard of the fox hounds returning from the hunt, sighted him with joyous yelps, evidently laboring under the impression that they were expected to retrieve the ball he was about to putt. Promptly called in by the huntsman they immediately conveyed the good news to the entire pack which dashed to the green just as Mr. Johnson was about to make a second try, this time imbued with the idea that a game of leap frog was about to be begun, responding reluctantly to recall.

With a sigh, Mr. Johnson once more dropped into position, a signal for the glad return of the pack, who noticing his discomfiture at this the second interference, immediately assumed that the game was tag and the golfer "it." The united efforts of Master and Huntsman were necessary to dispel this final illusion, and Mr. Johnson settled down again only to see a straggling hound dash wildly before him just as he swung the club.

In spite of his annoyance, "Birdie" as he is familiarly known on "Exchange," laughed long and loud. "That bunch evidently thinks I want to sell but I don't," was his remark as he shook hands with Mr. Keating.

The 1912 Sportsmen's Show

Shooting, over the traps for the shotgun sharps and from the butts for the riflemen, will, coupled with fly and bait casting, be the keynote of the action of the second annual international indoor Trap Shooting Tournament and New York's annual Sportsmen's Show, March 1st to 9th inclusive. Hand in hand with the Show's management, the famous Camp Fire Club of America and other sportsmen's organizations, are working to make the 1912 Sportsmen's Show something far beyond anything heretofore dreamed of and to combine with it the proposed Congress of American Sportsmen, which at a grand annual meeting in the metropolis, can pass each successive year on national and international questions that are vital to the best interest to field sports.

Mr. Stagg an Interested Visitor

A. A. Stagg, football coach of Chicago University, and famous as Yale's championship pitcher, is spending several weeks here in the enjoyment of golf. Mr. Stagg is much impressed with the golf equipment and prophesies permanent popularity for the game.
