ENJOYED BY ENTIRE VILLAGE

Annual Carolina Cotillion is Season's Most Brilliant Affair

Figures, Favors and Decorations Combine to Make Evening One Long to be Remembered

ENJOYED by the entire Village was Thursday evening's Washington's Birthday Cotillion at The Carolina; the company in attendance taxing the capacity of the music hall and the program equally enjoyable to both participants and onlookers. In harmony with the occasion were figures, favors and decorations; refreshments served at intermission.

The hits of the evening were the chariot race and steeplechase, elaborately carried out to the minutest detail. In the former four young men and four young women drawing perfectly constructed miniature chariots decorated in red, white and blue, driven by a young man and young woman, raced about the hall, steeds and charioteers dancing together at the close with blue ribbons for the winning four.

The elaborate properties of the steeplechase made this figure the most attractive of the evening, the hurdles including not only the regulation jumps with take-off guards, but stone wall, brush and hedge jumps, and distance markers. The race was a tandem affair, the participants dancing together at its close. Partners were also selected by aid of hatchets in the "Joshua Reynolds" and "Henry Van Dyke" numbers.

Huge paper costumes representing frogs, cats and lions were as picturesque as they were deceptive and the old-time frolics in the way of potato races and the like were as popular as ever, while the new trombone and piccolo numbers presented under the guise of "A Moment, Please" and "Aren't you Horrid" offered possibilities of the almost but not quite character. Several marches, Paul Jones and extra numbers added to the interest of the program.

The attractive favors included red, white and blue musical batons, American flags, fans, cardboard hatchets, George Washington hats, Martha Washington bonnets and the usual noise makers, a confetti battle following the closing waltz. Details of arrangement were in (Concluded on page two)
