PINEHURST, MOTORISTS' MECCA

Westgard Predicts Great Automobile Future for Village

THE IDEAL climate and the many out-door attractions of Pinehurst are destined to make the resort a mecca for motorists as soon as the trunk line routes from the North are put in such condition that the Village can be reached with comfort. ¶ While Moore County, in which Pinehurst is located, and also some of the adjoining counties, have done wonders in road improvements, it is nevertheless unfortunately a fact that this popular stretch of atrociously bad clay roads, near Newark, Delaware. This road has been almost an effectual bar for years against reaching Washington from the North via this direct route, because during rainy weather tourists were compelled to make the long detour from Philadelphia via Gettysburg to Washington, almost doubling the distance of the direct route, and even then not finding any too good service for motor travel. South of Richmond, in Virginia and in North Carolina, improvements are slowly being made which encourage one to hope that the trip from Richmond to Pinehurst, and even farther South to other resorts, may be made in the rearesort is almost barred for Northern motorists by reason of the hundred and thirty miles of practically prohibitive cow-trails which serve as roads between Washington, the national capital, and Richmond, the capital of the confederacy. Since the battling armies dragged their cannon along these trails during the war practically nothing has been done towards affecting improvement of this stretch. I have surveyed two tentative routes, looking towards the improvement of the road between these two cities, but so far little actual work is in evidence towards betterment.

And that is not all. ¶ Between Philadelphia and Baltimore there remains a While the roads from Wilmington, N. C., to Pinehurst are passable under favorable conditions, it is probably true that this route is not in sufficiently good shape to induce many Northern tourists, at least at the present time, to ship their cars by boat to Wilmington for the purpose of reaching Pinehurst over this route. However, steps are being taken to put this route in better shape, and it is thought that the communities along this line can be made to see the advantages of its betterment.

Mr. Leonard Tufts, the owner of Pinehurst, is known nation wide as a prac-
