

QUAINT WAR TIME ENVELOPES

Some Sketches and Inscriptions Used During the Rebellion

From down in the bottom of an old trunk, stored away in the dusty attic of a down-East farm, there has just come to light a packet of "war" envelopes used in the days of the rebellion. How long they have been stowed away is not known, but it is safe to presume that between forty and fifty years have elapsed since the mother of the person who has found them put them away with other relics of the struggle between North and South. Despite age the envelopes are still in good condition and might well be used for mailing purposes, although the white ones are becoming tinged with yellow, and those of other colors show the effects of the nearly half century.

The envelopes are unique in that on the left hand side of each is a sketch with appropriate words printed beneath. One is a small cartoon portraying Jefferson Davis tickling the ear of a lion with a piece of cotton on the end of a stick. It is headed "Jefferson trying to tickle the British lion with cotton," and underneath is the reply of the lion, as follows:

"Jeff, it's no use; I can do nothing for you till you bring a certificate of good character from your old Uncle Sam."

Another is a sketch of a Union soldier in uniform, and underneath it is the quotation from Ellsworth:

"He who noteth even the fall of a sparrow will have some purpose even in the fate of one like me."

The Stars and Stripes in colors decorate the upper left hand corner of a white envelope of very light quality, which except for its yellowish hue from age might well be used today. In the flag there are twenty-four stars. Beneath it is the famous declaration of Gen. John A. Dix:

"Shoot the first man that attempts to pull down the American flag!"

An envelope which was originally of yellowish tint bears a sketch of John C. Fremont, the first Republican candidate for President of the United States. History relates that he carried eleven States, and would have been elected had he carried Pennsylvania and Illinois. Beneath his picture is an American flag, and alongside one of his famous utterances:

"Above every consideration is our country as we have learned to love it—one and indivisible, now and forever! and so we will maintain it."

The American eagle in flight with a shield in its claws, is reproduced on a white envelope, with the quotation from "The Star Spangled Banner":

Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto, "In God is our trust."
And the star spangled banner in triumph shall wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Gen. Scott is shown protecting Washington on another envelope. "Washington" is reproduced as a large cut of beef; Gen. Scott as a burly bulldog, while on the collar of a much smaller canine is printed "Jeff" for Jefferson Davis. From the mouth of the big bulldog are coming the words: "Why don't you take it?"

EIGHTY-FOUR YEARS YOUNG

Birthday Anniversary of Mr. D. N. Clark an Occasion of Pleasure

The eighty-fourth birthday anniversary of Mr. D. N. Clark of Woodbridge, Ct., an annual visitor since the inception of Pinehurst, was an occasion of pleasure for the entire household at The Berkshire on Sunday, the affair in the nature of a surprise for the patriarch golfer who is a living exponent of Hubbard's motto: "old age is merely a condition of mind."

On entering the dining room Mr. Clark found it dark save for the lights from eighty-four candles which sparkled on a huge birthday cake which rested in the center of his table, a present from Manager and Mrs. J. Milton Robinson. As favors at his plate were presents from nearly a score of friends.

Since Mr. Clark's arrival on December 10th, he has played eighteen holes every fine day, his best card on No. 1 course, to which he still retains his allegiance, ninety-five, forty-five out and fifty in:

OUT—6 6 3 5 4 6 6 4 5—45
IN—7 3 7 5 8 5 7 4 4—50—95
