FIVE CENTS

SPRING GOLF TOURNAMENT

B. Warren Corkran is the Star of Monster Contest of Many Thrills

A. A. Stagg, Walter J. Travis, John E. Porter and William C. Fownes, Jr., are Victims in Order Given

SATURDAY'S final round for the President's trophy in the ninth annual Spring golf tournament was the fitting ending to a remarkable week. To be sure, B. Warren Corkran of the Baltimore Country Club, was not hard pressed in his five and four victory over William C. Fownes, Jr., former national champion, but he was going fast enough to make his game in itself the climax of sensational play. ¶ Recording seventy-seven to eighty for Fownes, Corkran retired for luncheon, two up. Fownes rallied for a win on the twenty-fourth in the afternoon to lower the score, but Corkran was two up again on the twenty-fifth and he maintained it with halves on the twenty-sixth (which Fownes might have won on the green), and the twenty-seventh and gradually increased his lead, winning five and four on the thirty-second. Bye holes were played with a seventy-one as a result; a total for the day of one hundred and forty-eight. ¶ Mr. Corkran's card:

PORTER CARRIES CORKRAN 21 HOLES

Corkran's semi-final was a twenty-one hole battle royal with John E. Porter of the Allegheny Country Club, in which the result hung in doubt as a feather floats downward and one speculates upon its resting-place, from first hole to last. ¶ From the start it was apparent that the pace was to be very fast and the pair made the turn in forty each, even up. Corkran won first honors coming home, taking the tenth, 4—5. The eleventh was halved in 6, Porter losing an opportunity to win on the green (where, by the way, he was a bit short throughout the match), for Corkran's tee shot made the rough. Porter captured the twelfth, 5—6, and likewise the thirteenth, 4—5, where Corkran was in the rough again. On the fourteenth, Corkran won, 4—5, through Porter's error on the green, and the Baltimorean holed a fifty-foot running-up approach to win the fifteenth in 2, which Porter failed to equal only by a hair's margin. The sixteenth was likewise sensational, for Porter laid a pulled tee shot from the rough, dead to the hole and went down in 3 to 4 for his opponent. On the short seventeenth, through a brilliant putt by Porter which looked very much like a negotiated stymie. ¶ The twentieth was a hole of many thrills, for Corkran's second made the whisker bunkers guarding the green at the left and rested just on the edge of the pit, while Porter's iron placed him but a few yards short of the green. Corkran's recovery was good but he Porter gained the lead with a 3 by making the green with his iron, to 4 for Corkran who overran. Dormie one, Corkran captured the eighteenth, 4—5, for a tie through a pulled and short drive by Porter which went far out to the rough at the right, and from which he recovered well but at the loss of the necessary stroke.

The nineteenth was a halve in 4 overran the green and Porter lost an opportunity to win by being short on his running-up approach putt. Corkran made a fine try for the hole but hit the cup, bounded to the left and lay dead. With the match at stake Porter missed by a hair and halved in 5. ¶ Both tee shots were fine and straight down the course on the final and twenty-first hole,

DANCING IN THE MOONLIGHT

Suggestive of Glorious Open is Program for Tonight's Spring Cotillion

Decorations and Favors in Keeping with Color and Fragrance of Perfect March Days

SINGULARLY in keeping with the season is the program for tonight's Spring Cotillion at The Carolina, decorations, figures and favors suggestive of the color and fragrance of perfect March days. The music hall decorated with floral garlands, will be repeated in the opening march led by the little Misses Eleanor and Winifred Croft, the charming twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Croft of Pittsburgh. By way of novelty there will be several dances by the light of a glorious moon. ¶ The figures include the steeplechase which transforms the floor into a course complete with its tiny hurdles, water jump, brush jump and stone wall. Huge paper costumes representing frogs and owls will conceal the identity of partners and the same effect will be carried out in the number in which young women, looking for all the world like monster ten pins, will be brought forward, one by one, as partners for a dance through the luck and chance of bowling.

The leaders are Mr. N. S. Hurd of Pittsburgh and Mr. Justus Kendall of Bethlehem, N. H. Presiding at the favor booths will be Mrs. H. W. Croft of Pittsburgh, Mrs. E. D. Speck of Detroit, Mrs. Herbert L. Jillson of Worcester, Mrs. Chisholm Beach of New York, Mrs. P. M. Shannon of Buffalo, Mrs. George C. Dutton of Boston, Mrs. J. L. Wyckoff of Holyoke and Mrs. J. Page Massie of Richmond.

The limited capacity of the music hall makes it necessary to confine the invitation to those who desire to participate. Names should be sent by couples to Mr. Justus Kendall, room box 278, Hotel Carolina, NOT LATER than noon today in order that necessary advance provision may be made for seats and favors. Tickets for seats will be sent in response. ¶ Grand march at nine-fifteen; dancing until twelve-fifteen. Refreshments at intermission.

For Monday evening the younger set at The Inn is planning a St. Patrick's day dance and for the immediate future the annual living pictures are planned.
