

THE THIRD ANNUAL DINNER

Tin Whistle Spread at The Carolina
Unanimously Declared Best Ever

Mirth and Good Cheer Reign
Supreme Until Long Past Midnight
for Congenial Company

"BEST EVER," was the unanimous opinion regarding the third annual Tin Whistle banquet at The Carolina Monday evening. And why shouldn't it be and continue to be, with memory for the past and anticipation for the future? ¶ As a gathering of classmates brought together from many sections was the group, mirth and good cheer reigned supreme until long past the midnight hour when congenial groups gathered in the hotel foyer to smoke "good morning" cigars. ¶ Covers were laid for sixty-four with a novelty in decoration which transformed the guests' table at the head of the hall, from which the seats of the members stretched away on either side, into a miniature six-hole golf course; tees, fair green, putting greens and tiny flags, bunkers, pits, a hill, a vale and a pond; not to mention the Clubhouse bearing the crest of the Tin Whistle Club, a rain-shelter cabin and a tiny herd of grazing sheep.

Presiding as the host of the evening was President Henry C. Fownes of Pittsburgh, who was greeted with a vociferous welcome when he introduced Mr. Robert Hunter of Noroton as toastmaster. ¶ In opening a brief reference was made by the Country Club secretary to the invitation tournament which soon after led to formation of the Tin Whistles, played in 1904 with barely a dozen contestants. President Leonard Tufts of the Country Club, the first speaker, paid the Tin Whistles a glowing tribute as an important factor in introducing golf to many who would otherwise pass it by, and referred to the Club as a most important factor in establishing Pinehurst's International pre-eminence.

Mr. T. B. Boyd of St. Louis followed with several snappy stories and referred to golf as the most fascinating and healthful of all athletic sports, and at the same time, without a peer in its companionships. ¶ Mr. W. L. Hurd of Pittsburgh read an original poem which dealt with the personal peculiarities of the members after the manner of the verse so much enjoyed at the first dinner, and Mr. Prestley S. Maclaughlin of New York followed with his usual rapid-fire comment. ¶ Resident Minister T. A. Cheatham made a plea for clean golf for golf's sake, and Mr. E. G. Chandlee of Philadelphia referred to Pinehurst, Mr. Tufts, Mr. Priest and the Tin Whistle Club with kindly appreciation. ¶ Dr. J. S. Brown of Montclair was at his best with stories, and Mr. E. S. Fownes' dialect yarns were inimitable, remarks by Mr. Edwin Henderson of Detroit, a few closing words by the toastmaster and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" concluding the program, which was greatly enhanced by music by The Carolina orchestra and singing under the leadership of William C. Fownes, Jr. ¶ The souvenir favors were silk buttons bearing Country Club colors of green and white and the inscription "T. W. 1913," a book of songs and dainty menu cards which were but suggestive of the excellent dinner:

To Meet Mr. Hogsett

Col. and Mrs. R. A. Swigert gave a tea at The Waldheim Wednesday afternoon in honor of Mr. T. A. Hogsett of Cleveland. The invitation list included: Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Priest, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Jillson, Mr. H. A. Waldron and Miss Lucy Priest.

At Home of Mrs. Redfield

Twelve tables were necessary at Thursday afternoon's card party in aid of the domestic science department of the Country School, held at the home of Mrs. Tyler L. Redfield; the occasion most delightful. ¶ Tea followed play.

Four Hundred Caddies

Over four hundred is the total of Pinehurst's army of caddies; the daily average of employed over three hundred and fifty.

WINCHESTER

"BRUSH" SHELLS

20 GAUGE

"LEADER" AND "REPEATER"

Winchester "Brush" shells, which have had such a success in 12 and 16 gauges and reached such a wide popularity, are now furnished in 20 gauge in "Leader" and "Repeater" brands, the loads being as follows: 2 1/2 inch shell, 2 1/4 drams (or equivalent) of smokeless powder and 7/8 ounce of 6 to 10 size shot. These "Brush" shells double the efficiency of your gun, inasmuch as they give a cylinder-bore pattern in a choke-bore gun without loss of velocity or penetration. They can also be used in cylinder-bore guns with about the same pattern and penetration as regular loads. If you have not tried them, you have yet to take the full measure of your gun.
