"SURE IS SOME FOX HUNTING"

One Tireless Fellow Leads Hunt
Four-Hour Fifty-Mile Race

Several rattling runs have rounded out a thrilling week for the fox hunters, one four-hour chase covering a distance of nearly fifty miles. Starting some three miles out, reynard made a wide swing towards Jackson Springs, and by many a clever ruse, kept the pack guessing until the sun mounted high. Tired out at last by the persistence of the hounds, it became a race of hillside dashes and swamp doubles, and, finally, a thirty-minute run with the kill on an open hillside.

A second fox entertained the hunt with railway track walking until a hound, lagging behind the pack, met reynard face to face and gave the trick away. ¶ Still a third fox fooled the hounds by feints at tree climbing but to no avail, and all indulged freely in the favorite pastime of log hopping.

"Some 'red' blood in these chaps, no doubt about that," says Master Twitty. "No pure-blooded gray can show their combined craft and strength. What's more most of 'em have cut their eye teeth in races with local packs, and they'll give the best of hounds all that's coming to 'em. It sure is some fox hunting! Never saw anything like it for variety."

COMMODORE NEWTON BUYS

Seeks World Over and Finds No
Spot to Equal Sunny Pinehurst

Commodore John W. Newton, U. S. N. (retired), and Mrs. Newton are the latest present season additions to the list of private owners. They purchase the desirable lot adjoining The Magnolia and will build a handsome bungalow early in March.

As Captain of the battleship "Nebraska" the Commodore was retired, and off and on he has seen most of the world. Not even famed "Southern France," he declares, can equal Sunny Pinehurst in climate and environment.

Coming for the first time early in November, he was at once delighted with the Village, and soon after determined to make it his permanent home.

Commodore Newton's father was General Newton, commanding Fort Baranacas during the Civil War.

27,451,689 Pounds of Leaf Tobacco

Leaf tobacco sales on the North Carolina markets during November aggregated 27,451,689 pounds, compared with 26,038,129 pounds sold by the Carolina markets in November, 1912. The first-hand sales for growers during the month just closed amounted to 24,954,002 pounds, the remainder having been re-sales for dealers and warehouses. ¶ Winston-Salem had a big lead over all the other markets, selling 4,563,374 pounds, of which 3,870,818 pounds were first-hand for the growers. The nearest competitor was Greenville with 1,994,112. Some of the other biggest sales were Henderson, Wilson, Rocky Mount, Reidsville, Kinston, Roxboro and Oxford, each of which sold more than 1,000,000 pounds.
