

Even her bitterest foes admired her beauty and rare gifts of intellect. Her character, on the contrary, presents one of the most difficult problems of psychology. The servility of Roman poets and authors, who are unwilling frankly to acknowledge the light emanating so brilliantly from the foe of the state and the Emperor, solved it to her disadvantage. Everything that bore the name of Egyptian was hateful or suspicious to the Roman, and it was hard to forgive this woman, born on the banks of the Nile, for having seen Julius Caesar at her feet and compelled Mark Antony to do her bidding. Other historians, Plutarch at their head, explained the enigma more justly and in many respects in her favor.

"The Greek Plutarch, who lived much nearer the period of our heroine, estimated her more justly than most of the Roman historians. His grandfather had heard many tales of both Cleopatra and Antony from his countryman Philotas, who, during the brilliant days when they revelled in Alexandria, had lived there as a student." ¶ Cleopatra was 39 years old when she took the asp to her bosom and died. Antony, who committed suicide after his defeat at Alexandria, was 53 at the time of his death.

THE CAST

Cleopatra Signora Giovanna Terribili Gonzales
Mark Antony Signor Antony Novelli
Augustus Caesar Octavius Signor Ignazio Lupi
Octavia, wife of Antony Signora Elsa Lenard
Charmian Signorina Matilde di Marzio

The Cleopatra of Signora Gonzales is an able characterization. This lady, like Cleopatra, is of middle height; but slightly exceeds the prototype in avoirdupoise. Signora Gonzales is graceful and possesses a beautiful and expressive face. Her acting at all times shows keen intelligence and a firm grasp of the situation in hand. The death scene, which is admirably done, is stately and affecting. ¶ Signor Novelli lacks the height and commanding presence that would make his Antony fully acceptable. He is still well remembered as the Vinitius of "Quo Vadis?" Signor I. Lupi, who is very happy in the role of Octavius, will be recalled for his excellent impersonation of Aulus Plantius in "Quo Vadis?" Octavia, the wronged wife, is forcefully presented by Signora Lenard and Signorina di Marzio is charming as the girl slave. ¶ Much care has been taken in the editing of the eight parts of this great subject. The subtitles are very appropriate, and the story throughout is excellently carried. The eight parts form three acts. The first and third acts have three parts each and the second act two parts.

Mrs. Wilson's Birthday

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Wilson of New Rochelle were dinner hosts at The Holly Inn in remembrance of Mrs. Wilson's birthday anniversary. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Scott of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sherman of New York, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Blanchard of West Newton and Mr. L. R. Folsom of Waban. A birthday cake was a suggestive feature of table decoration, with a novel surprise in the form of a mysterious package which sounded alarm bells at spasmodic intervals.
