THE SOUTH'S OPPORTUNITY

State Beef Breeders and Feeders Will Convene at Pinehurst April 10

THE North Carolina Beef Breeders and Feeders' Association is a big event for Saturday of the coming week, very largely through the interest of Roger A. Derby of nearby Drawing Creek plantation, president of the Association. From the tourists standpoint the "cattle show" will be the big feature, but there are several prominent speakers, also, among them Frederick A. Delano of the Federal Reserve Board, Dr. Bradford R. Knapp of the United States Bureau of Farm Demonstration Work, George A. Holderness of Tarboro, N. C., and President Benjamin Joy of the Shawmut National Bank, Boston, whose subject will be "The Possibilities of the Financial Development of the South from a Northern Bankers Standpoint."

President Joy, a Harvard classmate of Mr. Derby's, is one of the best informed financiers in New England and his speech will be a careful analysis of the situation which offers a new field and great opportunities not alone for the immediate section but the entire South; a point, by the way, which was made much of by Secretary of Agriculture Houston during his visit.

Headquarters will be at The Carolina hotel, the program closing with an evening banquet. The object of the meeting is to interest the bankers of the State in the production of beef cattle and to bring them in close touch with the State and Government beef cattle experts and the country demonstration agents.

NO, NOT FOR THE COLONEL!

The Invincible Makes for Tall Timber In Women's Invitation Handicap

An invitation bogey handicap for beautiful prizes contributed by Messrs. Fred Herreshoff, Fred Inman, C. F. Parrish, and J. R. Hyde of New York and W. S. Morse of Rochester, proved one of the most popular of the seasons golf tournaments among the women, on Tuesday. Heading the field was Mrs. H. R. Stockton of Plainfield, who with an allowance of plus three, recorded an eighty-eight gross and trounced the colonel good and proper to the tune of seven up. Mrs. R. H. Barlow of Merion at plus five, recorded eighty-six for the best gross of the day, and Mrs. J. V. Hurd of Pittsburg at plus four, made eighty-seven, both finishing six up in a tie for second.

Miss E. Marie Sinclair, of New York, aided by thirteen strokes, won fourth with five up, and the field numbered an even thirty-eight contestants; Mrs. W. J. Faith, Mrs. Guy Metcalf, Mrs. William West, Mrs. C. B. Hollingsworth, Mrs. J. P. Williamson, Mrs. Fred Herreshoff, Mrs. H. H. Van Cleef, Mrs. William Seyfert, Mrs. I. S. Robeson, Mrs. W. J. Foss, Mrs. J. P. Gardner, Mrs. H. J. Topping,

Mrs. R. L. Whitman, Mrs. G. M. Howard, Mrs. Donald Parson, Mrs. S. C. Jones, Mrs. J. D. Hathaway, Mrs. E. C. Beall, Mrs. C. B. Lawrence, Mrs. W. S. Morse, Mrs. J. T. Newton, Mrs. W. F. Howell, and the Misses Blanche and Barbara Farrington, Priscilla Beall, Florence Croft, Elsie Jones, Henrietta Brownell, Helen Barnett and Florence Howell among those who participated.

War Busy Aix-la-Chapelle

"Among all the places on the map of Europe that have been made scenes of feverish activity, none surpass Aix-la-Chapelle—Aachen the Germans call it," says the National Geographical Society's statement. "Here endless supply trains start out over the fan-like system of railroads to the front, and from the front converge the trains bearing their vast loads of wounded, converting the Aix region into a great hospital camp. With the return of spring a more fitting and more charming place could not be chosen for convalescence of the sufferers from the trench and shell torn fields of Belgium and Northern France. Aix-la-Chapelle is set into the hills, surrounded with superbly green-notched skyline, and sheltered by terraced forests, broken here and there, in pleasing variety.

"Aix-la-Chapelle is a place of scenic beauty, a home of modern industry, a city of churches and of relics. Moreover, it is a health resort, and has been such since the days of the disease-worried high-life of Rome. There are no better known or more oppressive curative springs in Europe than the hot sulphur springs of Aix-la-Chapelle. Perchance Charlemagne endured the healing offices of its waters whenever his health became impaired through his strenuous, bloody exertions toward the conversion of the heathens. "Since the establishment of the Empire, Aachen has sought to forget and obliterate its advanced age by the adoption of a sleek modern dress, and its large business of cloth, silk and metal manufacture has won it prominent place in the scramble of modern cities for industrial and commercial renown. Yet Charlemagne was crowned here, and here is his tomb. Further, the modest cathedral near the center of the town has been the scene of the crowning of thirty-five emperors and of eleven queens."
