HOW WONDERFUL IS SPRING!

And Sambo Whistles and Children Romp in Golden Sunshine and Purple Shadow

MAD with the joy of life is the mocking-bird and singing far into the night; Mayflower gone and crocus blooming; with ever and always the undertone of Nature's eternal symphony in the whispering pines.

¶ And, if you listen, you may hear—afar off—the wild dove's call; and, if you look, you may see the wood violet half hidden in the brown sedge grass. * * What a wondrous thing is Spring, not alone today and tomorrow—but the days after that! ¶ It is, indeed, pleasant to remember Pinehurst thus!

HAPPY IN ANTICIPATION!

Many Are Gathered at Holly Inn To Remain Through April

Possibly there is a cosier hotel on this green earth, perhaps a vine covered veranda more inviting; but surely no spot where flowers bloom more luxuriantly or birds sing more sweetly; certainly no more charming retreat to while away Spring days, happy in anticipation. ¶ With the closing of The Carolina, on Wednesday, comes the beginning of the end of a remarkable season, but gathered at The Inn are many who remain through the month while the smaller houses will care for guests until mid-May, and a number of the cottagers will prolong their visits until June.
