

A Triumph in Husbandry

A bitter blow came over the wire from the Georgia State Fair on November 9th. Twenty-four first prizes had just been awarded to all kinds and conditions of pigs. And Pinehurst failed to get them all. It is very doubtful if Mr. Swinerton, who is responsible for the raising and education of the porkers, will have the heart to return home. He only got fourteen of the prizes. However, this may be because the hog team was over trained. They had just come from a strenuous competition at Raleigh. The returns from there fail to state the possibilities, but show 20 first and 13 second premiums carried off by the piggery and dairy.

Return of the Turkey

His majesty, the wild turkey, is coming back to the land of his ancestors. A flock have been seen doing the trot daily at Blue's Bridge, on the main road from Aberdeen to Hamlet. The canoists report that they are becoming a familiar sight all up and down the Lumbee. In the other direction Mr. Jordan says that on Deep River he did not fail a single time last year to get at least one every time he went after them. This is hardly a criterion however, because it is doubtful if there is a man alive who can compete with J. F. Jordan on the trail of the king of game birds.
