

THE PINEHURST OUTLOOK

VOL. XIX, NO. 6

WINTER GOLF NUMBER 1916

FIVE CENTS

MIDWINTER TOURNAMENT

Carter Has It All His Own Way

Leads the Medal Play and is the Favorite for the President's Trophy End of the Second Round

IN A BLAZE of sunshine and under perfect golfing conditions seventy-two champions entered the lists for the annual Midwinter tournament Monday morning, January 4th. As had been anticipated Philip V. G. Carter, the junior metropolitan champion led the field home in the qualifying round with a card of 73. W. E. Truesdell, Fox Hills, came second with 86, and F. S. Danforth third in 89. Parker W. Whittemore of Brookline, who contested the honors with the Nassau player in the Holiday Tournament, was unfortunately obliged to withdraw his card at the last moment, making the result less in doubt than it would otherwise have been.

Carter's play was consistent throughout, and the very best of golf. The match was played on number two course, and he finished only two points above par, with fourteen fours, two fives and a three—a very consistent performance.

Out— 4 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 4—37
In — 4 4 4 4 4 3 5 4 4—36—73

R. C. Shannon of Brockport headed the second division, C. B. Hudson, North Fork the third division and A. C. Penn, Plainfield the fourth division.

Carter started his inevitable progress towards the President's trophy in the match play on Tuesday. He was pitted against S. A. Hennessee, the Cooperstown player, and won handily five up and three to play.

He repeated the score in his match with J. H. Clapp of Chevy Chase on Wednesday, in the second round. The end seems inevitable, but we are wary of predictions. It is almost an axiom of the golfing world that the winner of the medal play seldom can run through the field he leads. Last year Robeson, who won the United North and South, was the only winner of a major tournament who turned both tricks—the medal play and the match play in the same contest. The field remaining to challenge his progress has considerable danger in it. It includes S. Y. Ramage, Wanango; E. T. Manson, Framingham; and W. A. Patterson, Mt. Vernon.

The second division at the end of the second round finds R. C. Shannon, 2d; T. A. Cheatham, Pittsburgh; T. A. Kelley, Southern Pines, and H. C. Small of Toronto still in the lists, and going strong.

We go to press in this suspense. The go, 91; C. S. Macdonald, Lambton, 92; C. L. Becker, Woodland, 93; W. A. Wilson, Montreal, 95; T. A. Boyd, St. Louis, 95; E. T. Manson, Framingham, 95; R. S. Hawthorne, Wyantenuck, 96; C. W. Harmon, Wykagyl, 96; W. A. Patterson, Siwanoy, 96; H. B. Kennedy, Racebrook, 97; J. L. Weller, St. Catherine's, 97.

SECOND DIVISION—R. C. Shannon, 2d,

TALLY-HO LEAVING THE CAROLINA FOR THE NEW YEAR'S HUNT AT WEYMOUTH ESTATE
Among those present: Mrs. N. W. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Gibbony, Mrs. B. A. Alley, Mr. and Mrs. T. Sternfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Purdy, Mr. Joseph McCaddon and Joseph, Jr., Miss Lillian Gilette, Miss Frances Peters, Mr. Stanley McCaddon, Mr. G. J. Alley, Mr. A. A. Watson.

WHITTEMORE AND CARTER IN THE FINALS OF THE HOLIDAY WEEK TOURNAMENT

totals of the medal and the match play up to Thursday evening were as follows:

QUALIFYING ROUND

FIRST DIVISION—Philip Carter, Nassau, 73; W. E. Truesdell, Fox Hills, 86; F. S. Danforth, North Fork, 89; J. H. Clapp, Chevy Chase, 90; S. A. Hennessee, Cooperstown, 90; S. Y. Ramage, Wanango, Brockport, 97; the Rev. T. A. Cheatham, Pinehurst, 98; W. T. Barr, Shelter Island, 99; Dr. G. C. Fahy, Racebrook, 100; J. D. Barnhill, Fox Hills, 100; W. S. Van Clief, Richmond County, 100; R. H. Bacon, Oakland, 102; H. F. Lesh, Brae Burn, 103; H. C. Small, North Fork, 103; T. A. Kelley, Southern Pines, 103; C. R.

(Concluded on page sixteen)

AT WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS

The Sandhill Hunt Follows the Drag Hounds on New Year's Day

Gala Gathering Sandhill Citizens for Breakfast at the Boyd Estate Inaugurates the Community Hunt

MERRY it is in the greenwood,
When the mavis and merle are singing,
When the deer sweep by
and the hounds are in cry,
And the hunter's horn
is ringing.

(THE OUTLOOK desires to express its obligations to Sir Walter Scott, Bart, and to M. Clyde L. Davis, P. A. B. T., for this sketch of the New Year's hunt at Weymouth Estate.)

The hunt breakfast given at Weymouth Estate on New Year's Day was, without question, one of the happiest events that the Sandhill Section has ever seen. The plan was ingenious, the arrangements were right, and the conduct of the frolic was without the semblance of a bungle. From the soup to the finish, nothing intruded and nothing was wanting, and the whole affair proved to be one of rare interest, pleasure, and value.

The morning threatened. The sun failed to appear and rain fell. However, about eleven the clouds rifted and shattered, the mercury came to a stand at a satisfactory altitude, and when the guests arrived at Weymouth better weather could scarce have been desired.

Wasn't it Thackeray who stated that all sorts and condition of men can fraternize and enjoy each other at a feast as nowhere else? If so, it would have been gratifying indeed to him to have been at the Weymouth Breakfast and observed his theory working out perfectly when put to the test. The planter, the merchant, the banker, the baker, the teacher and the farmer, the journalist and jeweler all caught the contagion of good fellowship and each was soon doing his bit in the medley of conversation. The lawyer forgot his humdrum wisdom and discovered that he was still human. The doctor for once got interested in people who were normal and well. Even the undertaker found himself inadvertently rejoicing

(Concluded on page four)