

THE MASQUERADE

New Year's Eve Celebrated by the Village by a Costume Ball at the Carolina

Right up to the beginning of 1916 the identity of a large number of the throng of dancers at the New Year's Eve Masquerade remained undiscovered—the identity of some, indeed, remains "wrop in a mystery" like unto the antecedents of Jeames Yellowplush even now, for they escaped without unmasking. Harry Waldron was a dour Puritan; Miss Esther Tufts a sprightly fay; Trumbull Dana an excellent French count, out of a story book; Miss Elsie Phillips pirouetted as a charming Pierrette, while Pierrot's part was played by Mr. Alley; Mr. Charles Mason and Mr. Ogden were officers of the Navy and Army, respectively; Athel Denham was an auburn tressed girl straight from the farm, his kid brother a prim and proper maiden from the city and his sister Beatrice a Tyrolean mountain maid who could speak only German with an Austrian accent; Jerry Jenks was a most convincing Mexican and Miss Hoffman the most graceful deep sea sailor whom we have ever noticed navigating on the broad expanse of the Carolina ball room; Mrs. ——— but if we try to complete the list of the dancers in costume we shall never be done with it. Everybody seemed to be on hand, which is the same thing as saying that everybody had a good time. The dance began punctually and ended otherwise. It finally did come to an end however, for costumes had to be changed in time for the hunt at Weymouth Heights in the morning.

Wanted at the Outlook Office

1. An extra stenographer. One qualified to read the Editor's handwriting at a pinch. Overtime scale of pay when so engaged.

2. A second-hand Ford for which the present owner seeks a good home and an excellent opportunity to acquire golf expetives in the pure accent of their native heath, rather than any large amount of money.

3. A bicycle. And one for a girl.

The Constant Condition

Side of Alphano for

Renovating Greens

MR. FLYNN, the greenskeeper of Merion Club at Haverford, Pa., recently called our attention to one very important reason for the superiority of Alphano over manure for greens renovating.

He put great emphasis on the fact that Alphano produced a "constant condition." With manure, he said, there is much straw and undecayed matter which when it finally does decay, causes a drop to the surface, requiring special work in leveling up. The only way, in many cases, is to remove the sod and fill in below.

Alphano being a prepared humus, finely screened, evenly granulated, it incorporates thoroughly with the soil, giving a constant condition.

It also forms a moisture holder and continues to contribute fertility for a surprisingly long time.
