that all his neighbors were still alive and in no immediate danger of crossing the Jordan. All this can be easily understood by those who tasted that breakfast. Soup, salads, meats, oysters, coffee, cake, cream, punch, etc., all done in the n-th degree of excellence and served in style and in decent profusion.

Then there was mounting of steeds in hot haste which was followed by a period of cool composure, waiting for the drag to come in. This gave those who did not ride time to stroll out to the best place from which to watch the field. The horn sounded, the dogs answered, and the hunt was off, across fields, over fences, through the wood and through the open, up hill and down hill, the horses following the busy dogs, and the horsemen giving an unprecedented exhibition of all varieties of riding. The intermittent daylight school seemed to predominate, however. The jumps were not too difficult, and good sense had decreed that it should not be necessary to take them on a tired or untrained horse. In less than an hour the hunt was over. The watchers at the field saw the hounds come in with the red-coated whips close behind and after them the rest of the hunters warm and happy. At the finish a philosopher who was present remarked that the hunt was like most of the good things of life and indeed like life itself—a glorious and enthusing hurrah with nothing at the end of it. But the day will not soon be forgotten, and the myriad-phased value of such a meeting is obvious.

“So let us sing, long live the King,
And Jim Boyd, long live he,
When he again doth ride abroad
May I be there to see.”
