Saves the Club House from Conflagration

Rolling home from the party of parties at the Lift the Latch last Monday evening your orator came upon the strangest sight that ever astonished his gaze in confines of the Sandhills. And these confines aforesaid abound in strange sights. Gathered upon the greens and fairways the forms of many gay figures could be discerned flitting about, the red sweaters distinctive of our leading ladies being the prevailing motif. Chairs and tables began to loom out of the darkness, and mysterious halloween lights glimmer in the Club House.

Evidently a great lawn party was in progress. We speculated mightily on this new owl festival, and what kind of a game it was. Coming closer we conjectured that the golf clubs and the furniture had gone on a strike. These were all on the lawn in congress assembled.

A burst of flame from the caddie house and Donald Ross' Sarcophagus of Worth-emptied the precious nibbles and paraphernalia for the morning's contest on the lawn, and rescued the chairs and the furnishings, and led the cheering.

It all amounted to little in the total. The caddie house was destroyed, and the store room badly damaged, but the club house proper was none the worse for the excitement. Everyone had a scramble to get his own bag back into its lair, and there was a few moments in swapping sweaters next morning. But the tournament proceeded as scheduled, and today it is a legend.

A Putting Party

was given on Friday last by Mrs. Henry S. Houston at Fernleigh Cottage for the benefit of the Farm Life School. This was found to be a very popular and refreshing change from the conventional bridge sketch, by a large part of the village which attended.

Fusillade

The weekly fusillade at the Gun Club, in the weekly trap shooting competition on Monday last was a triumph for P. W.

LAURA AGNES WALKER, Room 2, THE CAROLINA

ington and St. Mungo balls revealed the cause of the festival. The inevitable fire had arrived.

It broke out in the boiler room and soon threatened the structure. It had always been assumed that the building was outside of the limits of the village fire protection, and it had been insured on that supposition. The long and painstaking fire drills under Tom Kraig, chief of the village fire department now bore it efficient fruit. The chemical engine was on the spot coincident with the last shriek of the alarm. The hose was attached to the hydrant at the edge of the village by Dr. Brown's house, but as expected would not nearly reach. This did not phase Tom Craig. He mobilized all the hose in the town, whatever size or purpose intended, and by ready methods of his own pieced the stream of water together and himself led the vanguard into the building and drowned out the flame.

Meanwhile the fashionable audience at the Carolina Opera House near by, and the leading citizens and the belles at the ball all arrived like minute men and Whittemore, the Brookline sportsman. He and G. M. Howard and John Ebberts all broke 93 out of the hundred targets. This was a very good showing for a windy day—but not better than the shoot-off, in which Whittemore only let one escape him, and Howard and Ebberts two apiece.

J. H. Andrews and Frank Butler were next on the list with 80 to their credit.

An Informal Dancing Party

was given last Wednesday night in the ball room of the Carolina by Basil Durant of New York. The irresistible medium was supplied by the colored symphony and after their retirement by Miss Hazel Treat at the piano and Mr. Fuller manipulating the drum corp. Miss Treat, Miss Dorothy Fuller, Mrs. Barber, Miss Barber, Mr. Staples Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Waters, Edward Beall and Terpsichore were the principal guests.
