MRS. BARLOW CHAMPION

Wins the United North and South from Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Price

Mrs. Hollingsworth and Mrs. Alexander Capture the Governors' and Secretary's Trophies

MRS. Roland H. Barlow, champion of Philadelphia, and winner of last year's tournament, retained her title to the annual North and South for women after a week of the most exciting kind of successful endings to hard fought matches. Not once during the contest was she more than a hairs breadth in the lead of any of her opponents.

Mrs. J. R. Price disputed the final round with her to the seventeenth hole, an even and interesting battle the whole way. Mrs. Barlow was three up after the seventh, and it looked as if this final match was to be a tame affair. This delusion was rapidly dispelled when Mrs. Price holes a twelve foot putt for a two on the eighth and astonished Christendom with another on the ninth. So the inward journey started with Mrs. Price only one down, and going strong—about as strong as ever any one has ever gone. She won the tenth and tied the score, and the gallery were once more treated to a doubtful and nerve-racking vacillating contest. On the eleventh Mrs. Barlow showed her utter contempt of the traps and bunkers, landing in two in succession without losing her stride in the least, and winning out with one long putt for a five. She ended two up on the twelfth, by some remarkable recovery after a drive into the woods.

But here the tables turned again and Mrs. Price took the thirteenth. Mrs. Barlow claimed the fourteenth, but stymied herself on her third shot on the fifteenth, and lost the hole four to three. With three more holes to play she was now just one up.

In spite of an hitherto unheard of impediment, a flying robin, caught squarely on the wing by her ball, and sent on the spot to the birds' paradise, Mrs. Barlow took the sixteenth hole in five. But the match was not over by any means. Mrs. Price at times through the game had shown unusual ability with the putter, and that she was a dangerous opponent for anyone alive on a short hole. The seventeenth was a further demonstration. She made a remarkable and clean cut shot from fifteen feet, winning the hole in three. So once again Mrs. Barlow won her victory on the eighteenth green. Both players arrived close to the green in three, and Mrs. Price lost with three fatal shots, for a six against five.

Almost every member of the first division put up a hard fight for first place. In the very first round Mrs. G. W. Roope of Brae Burn made a strong bid to put the champion out of the contest. They were both even with 43 apiece at the turn, and they came nip and tuck to the sixteenth with no advantage to either side, and Mrs. Barlow only managed to win the match by perfect golf on the next two holes, both of which she made in par, three each. The match with Mrs. Hurd was so unusual and so dramatic that it has been treated in a separate article upon the second page. Meantime Miss

MRS. HURD'S MEDAL

Defeats Mrs. Barber by a Single Stroke

Qualifying Round of the North and South Develops an Exceptional Field

ON Saturday last congregated three score and ten of the best women golfers in the country on the links of Pinehurst to debate the North and South championship with Mrs. Roland H. Barlow, who last year won the famous tournament in masterful style. Leading all the rest in form and in reputation, and past performance, was Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, with whom in times past has rested the championship of these United States, of the Dominion of Canada, and of sorely pressed Britain. And great was the rivalry between these two. For only last week they met in close and even contest for the leadership of the Silver Foils, and played three rounds of the course to reach a decision of one bare stroke in favor of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Barlow seems doomed to lose in desperated finish. For in this qualifying ound she went out in forty-four and came back in forty-one, a score of eighty-five, two strokes better than her own best in the Silver Foils, and one stroke better than Mrs. Hurd's winning card in that event. But it was no use. She was greeted at the bulletin board with Mrs. Hurd's heart breaking eighty-four. Beaten again for the gold medal by one stroke. A six on the short and treacherous number eight hole, laying in wait out of sight over the hill behind the trenches and surrounded by declivities and pitfalls, proved fatal. The cards show that Mrs. Hurd gained an advantage of four strokes on the outward journey and Mrs. Barlow made up only three of these in her spurt for home.

Mrs. M. J. Scammel of Pittsburgh made third place with the very creditable score of 91, four strokes better than Mrs. Mason Phelps of Chicago and Mrs. G. W. Roope of Brae Burn, who each chalked up a 95. Mrs. E. R. Behrend of Erie, who gave both Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Barlow a pretty race in the Silver Foils championship, recorded a 96. All of the first division made the course in better
