Ian Hay of Kitchener's Army Coming to Pinehurst

Will Lecture on His Experiences in the Great War at the Carolina and the Farm Life School

CAPTAIN Ian Hay of the English Army, the distinguished author of "The First Hundred Thousand," one of the vital books upon the world war, and one of the great forces in mobilizing the British Empire for the struggle, has come to America to give our people some conception of the meaning and gigantic proportions of the battle of the Nations. He is coming to Pinehurst about Christmas time, and will give an intimate first hand account of life at the front and the battle of the trenches. The date will be announced by THE OUTLOOK as soon as definitely determined.

SWINNERTON'S SURPRISE

two thoroughbreds made the 9-16th over a heavy track in 1.01 and had the spectators guessing the whole way. But here again Hurd was vindicated, and sent his new pony back to the stable with the blue decoration.

A SUCCESSFUL STRATEGEM

Romulus, driver extraordinary to the ox-stall and the canery, again showed the value of strategem and cunning on the track, to the almost insane delight of the multitude. He had entered his favorite goat in bitter competition against the aristocratic and fleet Billy of Little Boy Blue. At the outset it was apparent that the usual procedure might prove fatal, so he hit upon the expedient of making his steed run away. Anyone knows a runaway goat is faster than any ordinary Billy travelling for his constitution. What matter if the pace become so wild that the chariot turn over, and now right side up and now upside down swirl through the dust to the howling of the mob. Thus are victories won, in Voodoo land.

His Denomination

Frank Butler tells a story of the time when he was with the Wild West Show. "You know we had to get a lot of Indians, and the Government was mighty busy with the red tape, and asked all manner of questions—to show they would get their salaries paid and be brought back again, and everything you ever heard of. Well, one time I had to go out to the Standing Creek reservation to round up sixty braves for the Deadwood stunt. I had a fellow along as an interpreter. His name was Bronco Bill, a cowboy. He had married a squaw, and could talk the lingo. When he got done with all these million questions we had to ask every Indian, the Government fellows tood a hand at Bronco, and commenced pumping him to see if he was fit to be an interpreter, and on the level.

"About the third question they asked him was, 'What is your denomination?'

"This was a new one on Bronco, and he studied a long while before venturing an answer. Now the Governor had given him a very fine six shooter, the pride of his life and the one darling of his soul—more to him than squaw and tepee, or the whole damned range. So Bill studies a minute, brightens up and answers proudly;

" 'Smith and Wesson.' "
