

THE PINEHURST OUTLOOK

VOL. XX, NO. 8

WINTER GOLF NUMBER, 1917

FIVE CENTS

THE RED AND GREEN

Pinehurst Colors First Home in Steeple Chase. Crocker Lands Guests' Purse

Miss Bliss Wins from Miss Yaeger
Kittron, Walter C. and Rosalie
Get First Money

THE Pinehurst Steeple Chase for the $100 purse raised even more excitement than usual Wednesday afternoon. In the first place they have lengthened out the course, and the start was down the road behind the pines out of sight of the stand. In consequence the thundering of hoofs and the rush of the oncoming steeds brought the people to their feet a moment before Col. Swigert's Magenta and Canary colors came whizzing into view on the great sorrel mare, Miriam H., with George Crocker's Blue jacket whipping the air one jump behind, and a span ahead of the Green and White of the Pinehurst Stables carried by Cameron on the old Jumper George. George was at his best this day. Ask Cameron about George any time. "Steady," That's what he says. "Steady will win yet." And steady did. The brilliant mare went across the polo field like a wild cat, but didn't fancy the new hurdle, and swung around just enough to leave Bachelor on the ground. She sailed on regardless, and over the next hurdle without rein or rider, but gave place then to George who was right there with the goods, as reliable as a pendulum, and travelling with an even keel at top speed. Travellor gave Crocker some trouble at the same first hurdle, and after that there was no recovering the slight lead the old stager had. They made a pretty chase of it twice around the field, George winner by a length or more.

A HARD FINISH

Mrs. J. C. Yaeger of French Lick, Indiana, took issue with what looked like a ride to a finish between the winners of the last half dozen girls' races. And she was right there with them at the finish. It had been given out at the paddock that she had better be placed in the prophecies, that she keeps her horse like a real jock. She got a knot in those reins the time she hit the horse's back just like a professional.

Miss Bliss came back with a vengeance today. She rode Jessie C., got off in front and was never headed. Mrs. Yaeger on Crow took issue from the start and stayed with her inch for inch, and the two came into the finish as if they were tied in that position. This doesn't mean that Miss Eleanor Abbe and Miss Esther Tufts were not contending for their customary leading position. Miss Abbe handled Button to the Queen's taste and held the leaders all the way. Miss Tufts meanwhile got a bad start, and at the bend seemed lost. And then she took counsel with her mare, Nellie, and went to the bat at the

(Continued on page five)

CORDES AND JONES

Midwinter Tennis Tournament Narrowed to Rhode Island and Cincinnati

Miss Ballin and Miss Cohen
Star in the Women's Events

J. D. E. Jones of the Agawam Hunt, sometime champion of Rhode Island, and winner of two legs of the Pinehurst championship cup, will work for permanent possession against Howard Cordes of the Westwood Club, champion of Cincinnati and the ranking player of Hamilton County. These two will meet in the finals of the Midwinter Tennis Tournament at the Pinehurst Country Club Saturday.

Cordes sprang a surprise Wednesday in the semi-finals. It was known that he was no novice in

(Continued on page four)

ARMSTRONG AND CARTER. FINALS OF MID-WINTER TOURNAMENT