

Cordes and Jones

Cordes' 6-2 in the last set was a brilliant performance, and argues well for his chances of repeating Throckmorton's desperate victory of last year.

Jones, as was to be expected, made a steady march for the finals. The Agawam Hunt, as hitherto, sent a strong delegation, of which Jones is the leader. His mates, Herbert Sweet and R. B. Weeden, both had the fortune to fall to his end of the bracket and as ordained fell before his racquet 6-1, 6-1, each. Even Hugh G. Whitehead of the Norfolk Country Club could not improve upon this in the semi-finals, although he had previously worsted J. C. Jones of the 99th St. Tennis to the tune of 6-2, 6-2.

Whitehead plays accurate and consistent tennis, his long suit being to volley from the back court. But this is what Jones was brought up on. The match was much evened than the score would indicate, every point was contested back and forth in the prettiest kind of returns, the volleying running to unusual lengths, to the delight of the spectators. Jones was a bit the steadier, and it usually happened that in the end Whitehead missed the shot and so the game.

Miss Forence Ballin, champion this year on the West Side Courts, and Miss E. M. Cohen of the Merion Cricket Club, will meet to decide the Women's championship. Miss Ballin, who is one of the strongest players among the women in this country, has proved appreciably steadier than any of her contestants met so far. Miss Esther Tufts of Pinehurst, Miss Edna Wood of Brooklyn and Miss Dorothy Brown of Montclair all together only managed to take four games from her.

The hardest match in this end of the bracket was between Miss Gertrude Thurston of Brooklyn and Miss Wood in the first round. Miss Wood was driven to a 7-5 in landing the first set, and Miss Thurston more than evened the score, taking the next 6-1. The deciding set finally went to Miss Wood, after some very pretty play.

Miss Cohen, who has won the Pinehurst Tournament before, had her hardest work against Miss Carolyn Bogart of Elizabeth, who has been cleaning up everything on the courts so far this season. The score tells the story of an even thing, which resulted in favor of Miss Cohen by virtue of a little more experience,—6-4, 5-7, 6-4. Miss Cousens of Westhampton, also a familiar figure among the winners at Pinehurst, made a game fight against the Philadelphia player, driving her to a deuce set before she finally won.

The chances seem to be that J. D. E. Jones and Count Salm would take the Men's Doubles from Whitehead and Lewis although these last have shown a team-play and thorough understanding which has already proven too strong for Cordes and Anderson, and the Agawam team Sweet and Weeden.

The Mixed Doubles has only finished one round at present writing, leaving a well balanced and even field. Miss Ballin and Salm made mince meat of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Page of Aberdeen; Miss Bogart and Cordes played a more even game than Miss Cousens and Weeden.

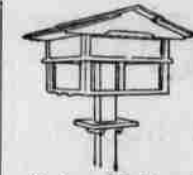

The winners in these matches are to fight it out with Miss Cohen and Whitehead, and Miss Wood and Lewis. It should be interesting. Thursday the Women's Doubles begin.
