COLONEL ROOSEVELT

May Use Sandhill Battalion

Writes George Maurice, Carolinas Represent Type of Which
He is Proud

AMONG the first communities in the United States of offer a military company to the Government in case of need for men in the field was the Sandhill section around Pinehurst. When it became evident that the most vigorous preparations were being made by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt to organize a division for active service, it was decided by a council presided over by Roger Derby of Drowning Creek to offer the services of the local regiment to him.

It is the ambition of all staunch supporters of the old American traditions and ideals—the traditions and ideals of democracy and liberty—to see the American Flag in Flanders beside the French and English in this last battle against savagery and despotism. And it is quite manifest that Theodore Roosevelt is both more earnest in this purpose and more certain to carry it out than any other man in this country.

So a letter was drafted asking if he could accept a battalion of North Carolinians in his division.

This was our answer to the taunt not unfairly directed at the North Carolina representative in Congress, asking—you say you were first at Bethel, farthest at Gettysburg and last at Appomattox, where are you in 1917?

Colonel Roosevelt's reply to George Maurice, the head of the committee, is as follows:

Feb. 27, 1917

432 Fourth Ave., N. Y. City.

My Dear Mr. Maurice:

I have just heard from Roger Derby that in the event of my being allowed to raise a division, you wish to come in with a battalion of North Carolinians. There are no men I would rather have with me. They represent the American type of which I feel particularly proud. I will communicate with you further, if I find I am allowed to raise that division.

Sincerely yours,

Theodore Roosevelt.

Burglar Wins Midwinter Trophy

It is reported that the great trophy awarded Dwight L. Armstrong of Yale for winning the Midwinter Golf Tournament has been taken vic et armis by a burglar. This theory was advanced by the local police. But Sherlock Holmes is at work upon the "Great Championship Golf Mystery" and expects to make some sensational disclosures showing that the contest for golf prizes does not end on the fairway, and that the golf bug is undermining the ancient order of Cracksman.

Bobby Jones

the amateur champion of America, will be in Pinehurst Saturday with Perry Adair to take a few days' fall out of the local talent and take a try at Carter's record of 66 for the championship course.
