EMPLOYEES MASQUERADE

Cottage Colony and Hotel Guests Enjoy Evening's Fun at Masquerade of Carolina Employees

If every one who was present at the masque ball of the Carolina employees last Friday evening, had been octopus-eyed they might have been able to keep track of what was better than a three ring circus. For it was a night that was a long time coming to the expectant participants, and when it did come it brought forth—well here's the story.

'Twas a long wait for the first sounds of the oncoming parade, which didn't come on because it was busying itself with formation. But those who have faith will be rewarded, and in due season the welcome news from the front went out that the advance had begun and from that moment to the hour of midnight there was never a dull period.

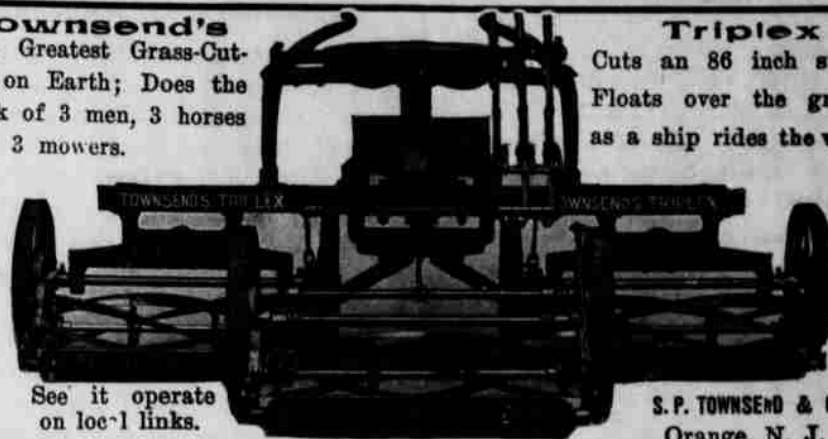

Down the wide halls sounded the roll of the drum, and behold marches such a picturesque array of colors and combinations, never before seen. Foremost in the glad throng ambles the stately and proud form of Uncle Sam, (James Mahon), and guarding his rear are Fred Kinnarney, Clayton Thompson and Burt Haverly, fitted out in the full trench regalia of our boys "Over There," and representing the spirit of 1918. Charles Peabody was certainly the "Big Ben" hidden inside of a perfect replica of that wonderful little thing which has a meaning of his own every morning about five A. M., while Patrick Harnedy was well bedecked in the grotesque garb of Happy Hooligan. Warren Downing showed that the long leaf Pine can be used to good purpose in the dressmaker's art and Laura Winch, Lila Gleason and Minnie Martin also came forward impersonating the grove of pines. Anne Griffen represented the back to the soil movement by appearing as a farmer with Helen Ward as her sweetheart, while Elizabeth Boyle took the part of an old maid with the everlasting knitting on hand, in grand style. The fraternity of cymbals, better known as the Pinehurst Brass Band was brought into the lime light by a group of paladins and upon close inspection they were found to be Violet Johnson, Betty Morgan, Lillian Morgan, Margaret Besbee, Anne Quinn and Bee Kennedy. Sally McPhee showed that the style of dress not long since popular on the Amazon is quite becoming to youth and beauty here as well. Here comes the Pinehurst Laundry in the person of Ernest Ryle, and then behold if its not that egregious rascal and knight of the road Perly Crosby dressed up in the gorgeous habiliments of a regular hobo. Probably because it appealed to our patriotic sense, Columbia, (Marguerite Thompson), brought to our minds visions of the Star Spangled Banner and every realistic detail that goes with the thrilling words of the song of Liberty. Angie Desrosiers dressed in the striking and artistic raiment of a French Ballet dancer was irresistibly demure, while the Roumania costumes of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Crandall were strikingly attractive. Beatrice Joyce helped to advertise Thrift Stamps and sold a goodly number of War Saving Stamps by passing among the audience and offering them for sale, and then if it is not a rival of Annette Kellerman in the person of Theresa McFeeley, dressed as a "Daughter of the Gods." Oh Yes, there are others, no end to them. Frank Wheeler, represented the Pinehurst Outlook, Billy Gibson and Clarence Poland, Bedilia and her henpicked husband, Theo. Carter, freak of Nature, Howard Brooks Wright, Riding Lady, Ernest Warren, Colored Jockey, George Thornton and Burt Rich, Mrs. Bunny and son, Chas. Udell, comic Jew, Daniel Veatty, Little Willie, Lucy Shea, Springtime, Julia Lavigne and Alice O'Donnell, Newlywed couple, Anna Gardner, Chef, Edna Roope, Liberty, John Brenner, Chief Cook and Bottle Smasher, Wade Jones, Just Happy to be Alive, George Scott, Hodecarrier, Grace Lindsey, Egyptian, Amy Rowe, What to do and See Daily," Katherine McNeill and Belle Thornton, the immortal Tin Whistles, May Kennedy, W. S. S. and Thrift Stamps, Florence McDonald and Alta West, Tennis Players, Mary Meldrum, Red Cross Nurse, Florence Cochrane, a maid of 1861, Anne McFeeney, Vananti Roberts and Margaret Lynds, Carolina Bell Hops of 1919, and Nora Kennedy, Flower Girl.

The prizes were awarded by a discriminating committee composed of Mr. and Mrs. Souther, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. White, Miss Hummiston and Mr. J. W. Watson.
