NORTH CAROLINA POULTRY CLUBS EXHIBIT AT NEW YORK

Hens that lay, pullets that will lay, and chanticleers challenging the world, crowd the floors in Madison Square Garden at New York City this week.

In a space where, only a short time before, a company making one of America's finest automobiles had its exhibit, there are several display pens containing chickens raised and owned by North Carolina boy and girl members of poultry clubs.

Catawba County furnished most of the birds and sent its farm demonstration agent J. W. Hendricks along to bring back the latest information on methods, appliances and practise developed by the foremost poultrymen of the United States who attend this, the premier poultry event of the year.

The North Carolina exhibit was arranged through A. G. Oliver, state poultry club agent of the Agricultural Extension Service, under whose supervision the boys and girls learn how to raise pure bred poultry that pays. The exhibits is financed by the N. C. State Department of Agriculture, which last year sent the first exhibit of its kind to the Madison Square show.

All the birds in the exhibit were selected from farm flocks that are owned and cared for by club members and because they are of high enough quality to be exhibited among the aristocratic chickens raised by professional breeders, the exhibit of the club members serves as a big advertisement for North Carolina.

Most of the birds will be offered for sale after the show and it is expected that as was the case last year, they will find ready sale among fanciers with large resources.

THE TIN WHISTLES

The Board of Governors of the Tin Whistles has issued the following notice to members under the caption: "Are You a Slow Player?"

The Tin Whistles have been considerably criticized on tournament days, on the ground of slowing up play around the course.

It is admitted that members playing a medal round are necessarily delayed because they must hole all puts; still the members can do much to lessen this criticism.

The following suggestions are offered as tending to speed up the play:

1. A four ball match should play eighteen holes comfortably in not over two hours and forty minutes. If you can not do this the presumption is that you are wasting time somewhere.

2. You do not need to run between shots but neither should you saunter.

3. Get ready to make your shot while the other fellow is playing. This applies to marking down your score, choosing your club, lining up your putt, washing your ball, etc. The time wasted on tees and greens usually constitutes the difference between a fast match and a slow one.

4. In driving make your shot, then step off the tee so that the next man may play without delay.

5. If in spite of these suggestions you find you cannot play around without holding up the course, it is recommended that you split up into pairs, or else play number one course.
