OPEN NORTH AND SOUTH CHAMPIONSHIP TO JOCK HUTCHISON

The largest and strongest field that ever contested in the event teed off in the North and South Open championship on Friday last, and at the end of the two days' play, Jock Hutchison, the clever professional of the Glenview Club, Chicago, and known throughout the country as "Jock the Hutch," led the field by a margin of 4 strokes and won first money and Freddy McLeod's title with a total score of 291 for the 72 holes.

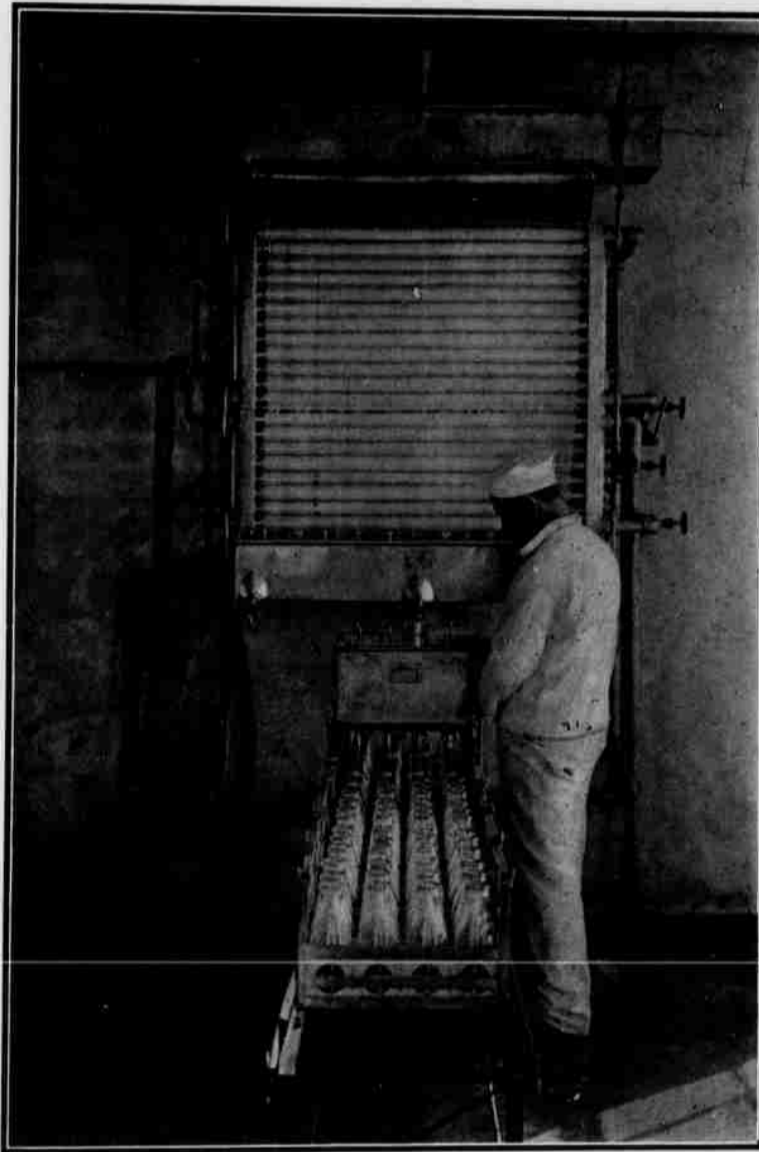

Jock played the first round over Number 3 course in 75, and at the luncheon hour was tied with three others for fourth place. But having lunched he evidently felt better and immediately went on a rampage over the same course and wound up with a record-breaking score of 69 for the afternoon round, making his total for the day 144 and tied with George Fotheringham for first place. Peter O'Hara, of the Shaekamaxon Club, was second at 147, and his brother, Pat, had 149 for third place.

The championship course was used for both rounds of the second day's play and the best golf of the day was played in the morning hours. Hutchison kept up the terrific pace and turned in a 71 against 72 for Fotheringham, making him 1 stroke ahead at the noon hour. Peter O'Hara went around in 70 and was only two strokes from the leader and one stroke behind the second man when the afternoon round was started.

The leaders at the end of the third round were: Hutchison, 215; Fotheringham, 216; Peter O'Hara, 217; Leo Diegel, 221; Freddy McLeod, 223; Martin O'Laughlin, 223.

Interest then centered in the last round battle between the leading pair, and an enormous gallery went around with them. Time and again it was necessary for one or the other of the two players to check his swing in the very act of playing and to wait until members of the gallery had moved back or to one side to allow room for the shot. But in spite of the interference of the big throng and the strain naturally attendant upon fighting out so close a race, both contestants played magnificent golf from start to finish, Hutchison finishing in 76 and Fotheringham in 79. Peter O'Hara failed to take advantage of a good opportunity to win the title and indulged in a 79.

Freddy McLeod, winner of last year's event, made a great stretch run and finished with a 72 which gave him a total of 295 and tied with Fotheringham for second place.

A Scene at the Pinehurst Dairy

Walter Hagen, former national champion, and Joseph Kirkwood, the Australian champion and trick shot artist, were paired together in the final rounds and were followed by almost as large a gallery as attended the rounds of the leaders. Hagen was badly off his game and finished in a triple tie, at 302, for ninth place. He did not miss more than two or three putts of less than ten feet in the course of the entire day, but his long game was consistently erratic on the way to the greens, but on account

NON-WINNERS TOURNAMENT FOR TIN WHISTLES

The Tin Whistles staged a non-winners tournament on Tuesday last for members who had not won a prize in that organization up to that time, and six additional members went over to the winning side. Play consisted of 18 holes medal play and the field was led by W. M. Hagen with a score of 89-28-61.

H. P. Drysdale went around in 92-22-70 and annexed the second prize, one stroke ahead of H. W. Ormsbee, 99-28-71, third. Other winning members were Fred Wardell, Warren Bicknell, and J. D. Chapman. Chapman's round of 80 was the best gross score of the day.
