THEATRE

WILD ORCHIDS—Is an admirable vehicle for Greta Garbo's unusual talents. Cast as a misunderstood and neglected wife, Miss Garbo imbues the part with an ardor she displayed in "A Woman of Affairs" and all the tragedy which she showed in her interpretation of Anna Karenina in "Love." If anything, she proves to be more beautiful in this film than she ever has been before. In one scene, dressed in the revealing costume of a Javanese bride and standing on a moonlit balcony, Miss Garbo appears as an unearthly figure of loveliness. Her splendid acting, the intelligence with which she interprets a difficult role, and her all-surpassing beauty in this picture will undoubtedly make many new admirers for the lovely Swedish star.

The background of exotic life in Java has been faultlessly brought to the screen, but yet has never been allowed to intrude upon the story itself.
