

At Southern Pines

THE PADDOCK will have its first hunt next Saturday, going out with the Moore County Hounds on a drag hunt.

The deer season, open from now until January fifteenth in these parts, and the bird season, open for the Sandhills until February fifteenth, will draw a great many sportsmen from the North. (Mr. Butler's article in this issue is very much in point.)

Mr. Frank Gould, of the Manufacturers' Record, was at the Highand Pines Inn for the Thanksgiving holidays and had with him Mr. H. L. Clark, of Baltimore. Mr. E. J. Walsh of Rochester, and Mr. M. E. Welsh of Syracuse, joined Dr. F. T. McNamara and Rev. P. J. Brophy for a period on the links.

Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Ticknor stopped over on their way down to Camden by motor. Mr. Ticknor is the owner and operator of the Court Inn at Camden and the Berkshire Inn at Great Barrington, Mass., and is thus known to a number of Southern Pines and Pinehurst people. Mrs. M. B. Meday, of Philadelphia, is hostess to Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Scott, of Buenos Ayres, Argentina

Mrs. Reginald Felowes of New York, has as her guest Count Rossi and Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Grover and Mr. Townsend Martin.

Former Governor Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire arrived Friday of last week with his family to join the cottage colony. Mrs. John L. McKinney, of New York, has come down to open her cottage in the next few days.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Ticknor stopped over on their rived and will be in their cottage on Weymouth Heights.

At the Hollywood are Mrs. M. D. Howell and Mr. J. C. Lohscen, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bodine, of Flemington, and Miss Susan Swanwich and Mrs. M. V. A. McCutcheon, of New Canaan, Conn.

INTRAMURAL

Thirty years ago the feeling between Southern Pines and Pinehurst was, to say the least, a feeling, so far as some of the residents were concerned. Now that the two communities are thick as fleas and on the best of terms there is no harm in recalling an episode of thirty years ago, when an electric trolley was run from this Village to connect with the trains at Southern Pines. By the railroad station where the cars stopped in Southern Pines a loyal partisan of this Village erected a large sign: PINEHURST JUNCTION.

Amy Lyman Phillips, the newspaper correspondent of Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, is at the Highland Pines Inn where she has as her guest, Mrs. Alice Leonard, of Clarksburg, West Virginia.

Mrs. Sloan Hilton, of New York, is occupying one of the Lachine houses on Weymouth Heights. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Eckert have opened their house for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Jerome A. Q. Franks have rented the Lachine house on Arbutus road, Weymouth Heights, for the season and will be down after the New Year.
