Not too early on Thanksgiving morning the fox-hunters gathered in front of the Carolina. The fox, given a generous lead, was followed down the old Southern Pines road and through the Pinedale woods, and caught up with—not caught — after an hour and a half. Reynard was up a tree, in which position his likeness may be seen on the cover of this issue.

Among the riders not moving too fast for the reporter were A. R. Balsam, William B. Gouger, J. C. Alexander, Miss Ada

May Wilson of Southern Pines, James Cullen and Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Edmundson of Warren, N. H., Mr. and Mrs. John Bunn of Asheville, Mrs. Beverley Walters, J. E. Hewston, William Crisco, and J. C. Thomas and Lloyd M. Tate, who organized the hunt.

The fox, captured after he thoughtlessly jumped from the tree, was kept for a few days at the stable but died shortly from rat-poisoning which he found in his box.

C. S. Strout of Biddeford, Me., a veteran golfer who had never tried his hand at bows and arrows, made a possible 54 to win the first archery meet of the season. It was a six-arrow competition from the fifty-yard mark, and was reported in the papers as the first meeting of the Carolina Archers' Association. The secret of this organization is closely guarded.

The Grantland Rice Sportlight, not satisfied with the gymkhana, went out in the woods beyond Aberdeen to take the first sound movies of quail shooting. The movement of the birds, the commands to the retrievers and the other hunting talk, and the final appearance of the quail on toast are included.

Special matched trot, one mile, won in straight heats by Forest Girl (W. H. Watt); Bon Bingen (Henry Scott), second.

The Spring Lake polo team defeated the Sandhills in a three-game series. The visitors lost the first game by a close score but avenged themselves liberally in the next two, winning them 10-4 and 8-4. In the second game Harry V. Maxwell of Springdale, was the star, tallying five goals. In the third match Spring Lake used the team it will enter in the polo tournament beginning this Tuesday. H.V. Maxwell, No. 1; Alex Bullock, No. 2; David Drage, No. 2; Lieutenant E. S. Mullineaux, Fort Bragg, No. 4. The Sandhills line-up was V. Z. Reed, No. 1; W. V. Slocock, No. 2; George Cameron, No. 3, and Charles Diebold, No. 4. Bullock played well for Spring Lake, scoring three.

The Army has entered the coming tournament, as usual. On Tuesday the 13th Field Artillery Brigade from Fort Bragg will play the Sandhills and on Thursday the 16th Field Artillery will meet Spring Lake.

The Mid-Pines Club is open today under the management of John Fitzgerald. This is the sixth season of the club and its third under Mr. Fitzgerald's management.
